Plastic Heart Pumps Life Into Miner

HOUSTON (UPI)—Dr. Michael DeBakey Thursday implanted an artificial heart in a 65-year-old coal miner who staked his life on the historic medical breakthrough.

Series Delayed

Third and final article in the series on pesticides by Irving Bengelsohn, Ph.D., has been lost in transmission. The Daily Colonist will continue the series as soon as a copy can be forwarded from Los Angeles.

Train Theft

Robbery Suspect Captured

LONDON (UPI)—James Edward White, who said his cut from Britain's $7,300,000 great train robbery was $364,000, was found by Scotland Yard detectives Thursday living in an 111-a-week room overlooking the English Channel.

White, 45, a Second World War paratrooper and erstwhile innkeeper, was arrested in the city resort town of Littlestone-on-Sea.

He said he was "fed up being on the run" for the 1963 robbery, history's greatest.

CHARGED

Members of Scotland Yard's crack "Flying Squad" rushed White to Aylesbury, 40 miles northeast of London and headquarters for the investigation into the theft.

White was charged Thursday night with "conspiring to rob the mail and robbing the mail with other persons and being armed with offensive weapons. He was to appear today before a magistrate in Linslade, not far from Aylesbury.

White had been the subject of the most intense manhunt in Britain since the days of Jack the Ripper for his part in

NEW YORK (LAT)—The president of the American College of Physicians predicted Thursday it will take another decade for heart transplants to become widely used surgical procedures.

But, Dr. Irving S. Wright called Dr. Michael DeBakey's heart transplant in Houston, Tex., the beginning of a new chapter in medicine, which will eventually extend the lives of thousands of heart patients. In terms of benefit to humanity, the age of artificial organs and transplants will surpass the exploration of space, the New York cardiologist said.

"We have entered a new chapter of medicine, in the same way that the first space shot signalled man's move into deep space probes," he said. "The first probes may not be very successful, but they will lead to successes in the future."

"The many problems—the body's rejection of foreign substances, the failure of pumping systems, difficulties with clotting—all have to be overcome," Wright said. "We know we will see them, but we don't know the incidents we will have to expect or the success in combating them."

"The only way to find out, really is by implanting them in man. You can go just as far in experiments with animals. But you run into problems with man that you don't find in animals. What works well in animals will not necessarily work in man."

U.S. War Toll to Date Could Double This Year

From AP, UPI

The number of Americans killed in the Viet Nam War now is more than 3,000. It could reach 6,000 or more by the end of the year if the recent rate of battle losses is maintained.

A summary of U.S. casualties, released Thursday, listed 3,047 servicemen dead since Jan. 1, 1961, the date from which the U.S. counts its Viet Nam dead. The roster increased by 89 names in the week ended Saturday, April 16. Combat deaths for 1965 stood at 1,365.

EXCEEDS 1965

The new report showed more men died in the last 3½ months of 1965 than in all of last year. The 1965 total reached 1,427 through April 16. Combat deaths for 1965 stood at 1,365.

DOCTOR TIRED

"The operation went much as I hoped and planned," DeBakey said when it was over.

He looked tired in his white surgical smock. He had only a few minutes to talk before he ran back to his patient.

Two assistants stood with him, weary but smiling.

CLOTTING

Through Dr. John Lancaster, a heart specialist, DeBakey reported that De Rudder's heart had "clotted" around the valves and showed "significant damage."

De Rudder was brought to Methodist Hospital April 14. His 60-year-old wife is a checker in a supermarket at Westville, Ill., and he had been so ill he had been barely able to sit up.

DeBakey had said beforehand that he would use the artificial heart only on a patient otherwise doomed.

The 57-year-old DeBakey said he "felt more secure" having battled so close to Saigon today that residents of the capital could see bombs hurtling on their targets from U.S. bombers supporting the operation.

BIG BATTLE

In the Central Highlands, the Viet Cong made a mortar attack before dawn on the air field at Pleiku, 240 miles northeast of Saigon.

Red Missiles Spur U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—A speedup in ballistic missile defense for the U.S. was urged Thursday by the Senate armed services committee to match reported Russian efforts on similar defenses.

Chairman Richard B. Russell (Dem.-Ga.) said the committee unanimously approved addition of $167,500,000 to defense authorization for a complex anti-missile missile.

Meanwhile U.S. and Vietnamese marines and the Viet Cong

Police in Cholon, the Chinese section of Saigon, described the operation on the outskirts of the capital as a big one. They said U.S. and Vietnamese were engaged with the Viet Cong near the Long Vinh, which cuts through the Cholon sector.

The bombing was among the closest ever made to Saigon and the explosion of the bombs rattled windows and tableware in the heart of the city.

THREE SHOT

Politically-inspired violence erupted Thursday in the normally tranquil resort of Dalat, which had been all but immune even from the Viet Nam war. Three civilians were reported killed in a gun battle between students and soldiers.

The fighting broke two days of relative quiet on the tense South Vietnamese political scene.

Dalat, in the mountains 145 miles northwest of Saigon, is considered the coolest spot in the country. It is an oasis for government officials, the wealthy and U.S. troops on leave.

No Charges Laid

Mountie Probed In Bank Holdup

OTTAWA (UPI)—RCMP

Commissioner George McClellan confirmed Thursday that a member of the force is under investigation for the armed robbery earlier this week of a bank in Trenton, N.S.

But a police spokesman refused to say whether the man was under arrest or had been charged.

Solicitor-General Lawrence Pennell said in the Commons under questioning from Robert Coates (PC-Cumberland) that he had been told no charges had been laid by mid-afternoon and an investigation was proceeding.

IT'S ONLY MONEY

Pennell was asked by Coates to confirm the arrest Thursday of an RCMP officer "and advise the House of the circumstances leading to the arrest as well as what charges, if any, are being laid."

A lone gunman collected $8,900 Monday when he entered the Bank of Nova Scotia in Trenton shortly before closing time, handed a teller a flight bag, and ordered: "Fill it up... it's only money."

The holdupman fled in a newspaperman's car.

Liberals Survive Confidence Vote

OTTAWA (CP)—The minority Liberal government defeated a Conservative non-confidence motion 112 to 93 in the Commons budget debate Thursday night.

The motion said the Liberal government failed to stimulate trade and production and had not tackled problems of inflation.

Seventy-four Conservatives in the chamber were backed by 15 New Democrats, Social Credit Leader Thompson and two of his followers and independent Conservative Maurice Allard (Sherbrooke).

CREDITISTES

Supporting the 103 Liberals against the motion were Creditiste Leader Caouette and six of his party, H. A. Olson (St.-Medicine Hat) and J. A. Monaghan (Ind.-Trois-Rivieres).

Standings in the 265-seat Commons are Liberals 131, Conservatives 97, New Democrats 21, Creditistes nine, Social Credit five and independents two.

Social Credit MPs have maintained the country does not want to another election and in the past have voted with the government when the issue appeared likely to bring a close vote.

PARTY SPLIT

This time the party split, with three of its members supporting the motion and one siding with the government.

The budget debate is expected to wind up today. Conservative House Leader Michael Starr suggested this during Thursday's debate.

George McNeil, Government House leader, accepted and reported his tentative plan is to begin debate on constituency redistribution next Wednesday.

Price Rise

Concerns U.S.

'Hope I Would Have His Courage,' Says Coroner

Mercy Killer 'Morally Correct'

MONMOUTH, England (UPI)—A coroner said Thursday a father was "morally perfectly correct" in taking the life of his incurably ill 12-year-old son.

Arthur Gray, 45, killed the boy who was dying of cancer, last July with an overdose of tablets and gas. Gray took his own life the same way last Saturday.

Monmouth coroner Kenneth de Trespierre said at the inquest on

Gray, "this is quite one of the most distressing cases I have ever had to deal with. It starts off with a perfectly happy family—mother, father and child."

The son contracted the disease in 1964. Gray was convicted of manslaughter but given the lenient sentence of two years on probation.

"I am quite certain in my own mind that the deceased was morally perfectly correct in taking the course he did take in connection with his incurable little son. Legally, of course, he was wrong," said de Trespierre.

"All I can say is that if I found myself in circumstances like the deceased, I hope I would have the moral courage to do what he did."

"One fact sticks clearly in my mind and that was the evidence that the little boy was so dreadfully ill that he actually screamed if anybody approached him when he was lying in bed—undoubtedly out of terror for the pain he would be caused if he were moved or touched."

The coroner said that after the tragedy, Gray and his wife separated because she had not wanted to continue living in the house where their son died while Gray refused to leave it because of his affection for the boy.

He said that judging from the notes Gray wrote before killing himself in the house, "it is perfectly apparent that he felt completely unable to go on any further and he refers to himself as ceasing to be any longer a useful member of the community."

Fire Injures Newsman's Wife, Babies

VANCOUVER (CP)—The wife of David Cowlishaw, the Parliament Hill blood bomber, was in satisfactory condition here Thursday night following a delicate throat operation and treatment for extensive burns.

Surgeons at Vancouver General Hospital performed a tracheotomy on Mrs. Beverly Cowlishaw, a few hours after she was brought in with second and third degree burns suffered in an early morning fire which swept through her East Vancouver home.

A hospital spokesman said two of her children, Lisa, 2, and Karen, one year old Thursday, were also in satisfactory condition with burns to their hands and arms.

Cowlishaw, 33, self-styled leader of Underdog, an organiza-

Execution Date Delayed

VANCOUVER (CP)—A stay of execution to July 5 was granted in Supreme Court Thursday to Frederick Myron Turner, 30.

Turner was to be hanged May 17 for the capital murder last June 4 of Marlene Porterfield, 20, shot from ambush as she waited to be picked up by her office car pool in Surrey, B.C.

Turner is appealing the conviction and judges have reserved decision.

The extension was given by Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan to allow time for the appeal to be completed.

Pope Speaks To Curia

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Prelates and clergy assigned to the Vatican curia have begun a three-day period of prayer and sermons as part of the special jubilee program to mark the end of the Vatican's 20th anniversary.

Pope Paul will deliver an address to the curia Saturday at the St. John Lateran Basilica, his cathedral as Bishop of Rome.

UN Appoints Refugee Deputy

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Albert F. Bener Jr., a member of the U.S. mission to the United Nations, has been appointed as UN deputy high commissioner for refugees.

Bener, 51, was appointed to the post by the high commissioner for refugees, Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan. He will assume his duties Oct. 1.

TOP SOIL

By far the cheapest and best fertilizer for your lawn and shrubs. If applied as top dressing (one yard for every 600 sq. feet) it will, after three yearly applications, develop a thick and lasting turf that feels like a soft carpet. This is how good and lasting lawns used to be made. One yard of our weedfree topsoil, costing about $4, contains over 225 lbs. of organic matter and minerals. In comparison, one sack of chemical fertilizer, costing about the same amount, contains only about 10 lbs. of plant nourishing minerals. Simple arithmetic thus proves that good topsoil is by far the cheapest and best fertilizer for lawns, both new and old ones.

The price of weedfree topsoil is such that considering the cost of dweeding and the health hazards involved, TOPSOIL THAT IS INFESTED WITH WEEDS HAS NO VALUE AT ALL.

Queen on way to open Parliament

Steel Takeover Pledged In U.K. Throne Speech

By JOSEPH MacSWEENEY

LONDON (CP)—The Queen celebrated her 40th birthday Thursday by giving a flawless performance at the state opening of the 44th Parliament.

The monarch looked happy and poised as, with Prince Philip, she opened Parliament and read the speech from the throne in ancient, colorful ritual.

In doing so, she outlined the program of Prime Minister Wilson and his Labor government, envisaging industrial reform and the nationalization of the steel industry.

While the outlook was distinctly modern, the ceremony probably involved even more glitter—thanks to television lights—than in the old imperial days.

And the speech from the throne emphasized Britain's continuing role as a world power, notably in its pledges to work for peace in Viet Nam as well as help Malaysia and Singapore in their troubles with Indonesia.

"My government will continue to give full support to the maintenance of the North Atlantic Treaty and its organization, which they regard as a necessary basis from which to promote greater stability in East-West relations," said the Queen.

"They will also support Britain's other alliances for collective defence and press forward with policies designed to enable Britain to play her full part in the promotion of peace throughout the world, without overstretching her military or economic resources."

"My government will continue to promote the economic unity of Europe and to strengthen the links between the European Free Trade Association and the European Economic Community."

Britain, now the leader of the seven-country EFTA group, would be ready to enter the six-nation EEC "provided essential British and Commonwealth interests were safeguarded."

The Wilson government will work for tariff reductions under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and for an expansion of Commonwealth trade.

The government review of external affairs seemed to leave foreign policy basically unchanged although there is some speculation over Wilson's attitude toward Europe. The speech once again emphasized the policy of bringing the illegal regime in Rhodesia to an end.

"A prime aim of my government's policy will be to restore equilibrium in the external balance of payments," said the Queen. "They are determined to maintain the strength of sterling. They will continue to work for increased liquidity for financing world trade."

The Queen's speech was regarded as a doubly important event. It was the first time she started in such a ceremony on her own birthday. If the Queen felt any private pangs at move into the "40s" age-group, she certainly showed no public signs of them.

It was also the first time that television, newsreel and newspaper cameras were allowed into the House of Commons chamber for an opening of Parliament. The last televising of Parliament opening in 1964 included only the House of Lords ceremony.

Present at the ceremony were Princess Margaret, a short distance away and Prince Philip, 35, gazing down from the balcony.

Pier Fishermen Just Watch As Boy Drowns

TORONTO (CP)—A crowd of fishermen watched Jimmy Wilkinson drown Wednesday. Jimmy borrowed a dime from his crippled father at a downtown newsstand, visited a pal's home, then went smelt fishing from a harbor pier.

The nine-year-old boy was playing with a pall when he fell into Lake Ontario—and "all people could do was stand around," said Dianne Reid, 15. "They could have saved him."

About 20 men were fishing for smelt.

"They had nets and everything else," Dianne said. "A man had a pole and poked around for a while. Then he went back to his fishing."

Harbor police, who recovered the body six minutes after they arrived, said someone should have made the effort to help the boy. "But no one did. They just stood around and looked."

Blind School Planned Soon

TORONTO (CP)—A new senior school will be built within two years at the Ontario School for the Blind at Brantford to replace the original 86-year-old building, says Keith Clara, administrator of schools for the deaf and blind with the Ontario department of education. The project will cost $1,500,000.

Let Right Be Done

THERE IS AN ANCIENT writ in the British legal tradition to which Canada is heir to the effect: "let right be done." Such as that in cases where there seem to be grounds for reversing a court decision or reviewing the evidence that led to such decision, no bar should exist to prevent renewed investigation of the case in question.

This is the position with respect to Steven Truscott, the 21-year-old Ontario youth now in prison who seven years ago at the tender age of 14 was convicted of murder, and concerning whose guilt grave doubts have arisen.

It was a measure of the reaction that has recently come to press upon the government and Parliament that MPs of all parties applauded the announcement this week by the solicitor-general that the Truscott case will be reopened. The nature of the review has yet to be decided, either an inquiry, a retrial or reference to the Supreme Court, but it may be safely inferred that it will be an impartial scrutiny of all the circumstances involved.

Public attention to the Truscott conviction, and the fears roused among parliamentarians that this boy may be languishing in prison for a crime he did not commit, is due to the analysis of the trial transcript and intensive study of the evidence that resulted in the recently published book written by Mrs. Isabel Lebourdais, whose own personal verdict is that a miscarriage of justice took place. Perusal of her conclusions has led to a feeling among many that the Truscott youth may be innocent, and sufficient doubt has been raised in government circles themselves to warrant the new assessment of the case announced by the solicitor-general.

Thus it is that the writ of "let right be done" is being invoked so that these doubts will not be allowed to go by default, but instead that a fresh and warranted review will express itself on the guilt or innocence of Steven Truscott. Nothing less would in this particular case be satisfactory to either conscience or the course of justice.

The Tax Goal

VICTORIA'S aldermen will go into their final budget-cutting sessions next week, with the hope of trimming back proposed expenditures for 1966 far enough to enable them to set the same property tax rate as last year, $22.90 on every $1,000 of taxable value. Boistering the expectation that this goal can be reached, even though most costs have risen, are three favorable factors. The direct provincial grant to municipalities has been raised by $4 an inhabitant. The school mill rate which is part of the total has for a change gone down instead of up. And the taxable value of property in the city has jumped.

But in connection with this last element in the financial picture, it is a fitting time for a reminder that to hold the rate of taxation at last year's level would not be to hold the tax itself at last year's mark for the many owners whose property has been given a higher valuation in the interim, in line with market prices.

The assessment total has gone up for this year sufficiently, according to city hall calculations in January, to increase revenue by $800,000 at the same mill rate as in 1965, and this sum is equivalent to seven mills.

Part of the growth of taxable value is attributable of course to new construction, and only part to increased assessments on unaltered property. Nevertheless, if the city could get along on the same amount of tax income as last year, the rate could be decreased by seven dollars on a thousand, and the impact of higher valuations thus cushioned or eliminated.

This of course is too much to expect. When almost everything is going up the city cannot make progress on the same amount of tax revenue as in the previous year; in fact, would slip backward in the provision of the services and amenities its people need.

Whether or not council should be satisfied to hold the rate at $22.90, however, is open to question. Undue parsimony in budgeting the city's spending is one method of making Victoria less attractive as a place of residence, business, employment and investment; a sharp increase in taxes for many by the way of raising assessments is another.

Triphibious Nature

AFTER THEY HAVE looked once at a new coin image most people probably ignore the design, attention being rivetted more closely on the monetary value it represents. Nevertheless it adds to the gaiety of things when variety spices these tokens of exchange.

A new issue of six coins, running the gamut of worth from a cent to a dollar, is being minted for the 1967 centennial occasion. The choice of design on the reverse side—presumably the sovereign's head will remain on the obverse—is not as could have been expected on a Confederation symbol representative of people, places or events—but instead of nature.

And triphibious to boot, embracing creatures of land, sea and air.

Selection of subjects for either coins or stamps of necessity has to be of somewhat arbitrary decision. The chosen images can never please everyone; in fact the Canadian mint worries much about this. But the range of these new centennial coins is at least widespread within the limit of the six extant denominations. A goose, timber wolf, bobcat, macarrel, hare and a dove—these are the chosen images. They typify, according to the designer, the elements of nature all around us. That they do even if many people have never seen them all in their natural state.

One might suggest that two aggressive creatures in the bobcat and the wolf is one too many when the limit is six. Or that for B.C. a salmon would suit the provincial menage best. It is perhaps unfortunate that the dove—"associated with spiritual values and peace"—should be given so lowly a monetary value as a penny. And that the majestic Canada goose should be priced out of one's pocket, the dollar coin not finding much favor.

These new coins may become standard issue, says Finance Minister Sharp, which means we shall become well acquainted with the 50-cent wolf and the 25-cent bobcat. But these are meant to symbolize the "vastness of Canada" and "intelligent independence," respectively, the theme of Expo '67 and Confederation celebrations in general. So that should satisfy us all.

"The report's almost ready... we're working on the punch line..."

Thinking Aloud

... of shoes, and ships,
and sealing was...
By TOM TAYLOR

THIS writer has never swung a hockey stick or even held a puck in his hand, the instruments of a native Canadian art denied him by birth and upbringing. And yet unduly it is, never so abjectly as fence-painting but full of pictorial and pulsating attraction.

His first introduction to hockey came long ago, in the prairie games of the twenties, when arena seats were as cold as the ice sheet itself and only excitement kept one warm. And when the big-time pros were stick-handlers like Duke Keats, Amby Moran, Newey Lalonde, Dick Irvin, Reg Hay and others whose names I have forgotten.

Stout and skilled exemplars of their art they were. Assuming they could be resurrected to their heydays they could hold their own, I fancy, against the cream of the present NHL crop. Especially if there were no substitutes and a player could as now get a rest every two minutes or so.

But if denied playing acquaintance with hockey, as long a sports lover yours truly has absorbed, to a degree anyway, some of the nuances of the fastest team game extant. How could he miss, especially since TV came to spread the appeal of its top-class exponents.

The small screen lacks the exhilarating effect of being present in person, as for instance when the Red Wings mortified the Black Hawks in the closing minutes of Tuesday night's game, but there is no small compensation in the close look that television makes possible. For so swiftly played a spectacle the cameras do a remarkable job of coverage, and they can give intimate glimpses denied those surrounding the playing surface itself.

The resigned or angry look of a player sent for his sins to the penalty box, for instance, or, as at Detroit, when the Wings' goalkeeper was overwhelmed when the game ended by the enthusiasm of his fellows. I half expected him to be carried off on a stretcher, so holoatrous were their congratulations for his superlative performance. Had he been a victim of their ire instead of a hero they admired he could scarcely have been more vigorously handled.

A mighty good job he was well padded, else he might not be fit for the opening encounter of the Stanley Cup's final phases.

This will take place, all followers of the game well know and a million or so others besides, on Sunday afternoon, when the proceedings will mathematically equate a certain CBC program of current controversy by compressing seven days into two-hour periods. Assuming, of course, the series extends to the limit of seven games.

I shan't be looking on come Sunday, from afar and yet to hear, but the part of my heart that belongs to hockey will be beating for Montreal's Canadiens. Why this should be so is not explainable. As with other sports across the line and across the Atlantic, I have clubs where I have never seen in action and never will, but who somehow have managed to claim my vicarious support. There must be an alchemy about unilateral preference of this sort.

No doubt I shall watch some of the later games of the playoff, as a dutiful bow to an art emblem of my adopted country. As well as for the sheer enjoyment of elegant manipulation of the puck, the style and competence of first-line professionals, and sharing in the hopes and fears of my own favorites, the Canadians.

Ottawa Offbeat

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

ABOUT the only really entertaining feature of this unusually bitter and not-very-funny session of Parliament has been the new multi-lingual simultaneous translation sound system.

Basically it was installed — with a microphone and an earphone at every MP's desk — to provide the Commons with instant bilingualism.

English is translated into French and French into English as the MPs speak their set piece speeches or trade quips and insults.

But for international gatherings such as NATO or the Inter-Parliamentary Union, the system can carry up to six simultaneous translations.

It's controlled by a team of operators at a "console" built into the diplomatic gallery who "play" it by flipping switches to turn on the microphones at the desk of whatever MPs happen to be sounding off, solo or in chorus.

A green light flashes on to signal a "live" mike. And nothing can silence an MP — not even Mr. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux — so neatly and completely as the console operators when they flip a switch to turn off a mike.

The catch comes when an MP fails to notice a nearby green light signalling a "live" mike. Like the other day when Agriculture Minister "Joe" Green was boring the House with an unnecessarily long answer his department had prepared for him in answer to a question of Conservative Leader Diefenbaker about rising meat prices.

On and on he went, with a rundown of farm, wholesale and retail costs back for 15 years.

Finally his seat-mate, Minister without Portfolio John Turner, in desperation, leaned far out of his seat towards Mr. Speaker Lamoureux whose "throne" is quite nearby, and behind the back of his hand, whispered — he thought — "God's sake, turn off Joe off."

Trouble was, something caught in his throat and the "whisper" came out as a sort of hoarse roar, picked up, of course, by Joe Green's "live" mike.

As it beamed through the grinning House, the agriculture minister, unafraid, with a courtly bow to John Turner, smiled "I'm off," and promptly sat down.

A more macabre moment came during Conservative Leader Diefenbaker's speech on capital punishment.

Among murderers he had known, he told the House, had been a certain mentally-twisted fellow who used crime as a way of attracting attention by being the "star" in a courtroom drama.

And from behind him came the stage whisper, picked up by his mike and echoed through the House: "Yeah, they want to be in the noose."

There was the off-guard moment when Ron Bedford, Liberal MP for Vancouver-Burrard, the co-chairman of the Commons Committee on Consumer Credit, was making a recommendation of reduction of the group's quorum from 21 to whatever number of MPs cared to show up.

As he sat down, to await the procedure to obtain the concurrence of the House for his committee proposal, a colleague slipped into the bench beside him, and not noticing that the green light was still on and the desk microphone very much alive, whispered "Does this get rid of the damned quorum?"

And this, together with Mr. Bedford's very satisfied "You bet you," resounded through the House.

Then, just the other day, when New Democrat Bert Herdridge of Kootenay East was asking Prime Minister Pearson if it was true that a "player deal" was cooking in the Commons to trade the old socialist to the Liberals in exchange for that Grit gadfly Ralph Cowan, a ghost voice gave the House its best laugh.

"It's a deal," came the whisper from the Liberal side over the sound system, "and we'll lose in three researchers, two secretaries and a box of money."

Bertie Herdridge beamed in modest pride that as a parliamentary "player" he rated such a premium price.

Whether Negroes, and particularly young, deeply disaffected Negroes, will be patient enough to travel this road, no one can predict. Many civil rights leaders have attacked the McCone report for what they charge is its failure to confront the deprivation of those shut in the ghetto with only a small chance of escaping. Bayard Rustin, one of these leaders, an associate of Martin Luther King, wrote that the commission seemed paralyzed by the "hard facts of Negro deprivation" it had unearthed.

"What is most impractical and incredible of all," he wrote, "is that we may very well continue to teach impoverished, segregated and ignored Negroes that the only way they can get the ear of America is to rise up in violence."

Watts was a costly lesson, and what it taught is still hotly disputed.

Massacre Sows Seeds of Revenge

By ROBERT S. KLEGANT, from Pekalongan, Java

The seeds of fearful revenge have been sown by the systematic slaughter of about 200,000 Communists and presumed Communists during the past seven months across the emerald arc of islands called Indonesia.

The world still knows little of the extent or the exact nature of the massacre which was, at the very least, stage managed by the anti-Communist Indonesian army.

A shadow of great uncertainty therefore hangs over one of the great and gory dramas of modern times. Above all, the figures are uncertain. Some estimates range as high as 500,000, while the lowest is President Sukarno's official total of 87,500.

My own estimate, which is by no means authoritative, is that between 175,000 and 225,000 men, women and children have been killed in Indonesia since the abortive coup of last Sept. 30.

Those figures are based upon discussions and cross-checking with a variety of sources, both in Jakarta and in outlying regions like the middle-size textile manufacturing town of Pekalongan on the northern coast of Java.

As far as I can ascertain 80,000 to 70,000 persons were killed in East Java, the worst area, and an additional 20,000 were murdered on the island of Madura, just off the eastern tip of Java.

In Bali, political passions, resentment of the outsider, and the resurgence of primitive feuds claimed 40,000 to 50,000—or 2.5 per cent of a population of 2,000,000 or one out of every 50 persons in the highest per capita death rate. The Balinese put entire "Communist" villages to the torch.

Central Java buried about 20,000, while the enormous, but sparsely populated island of Sumatra sacrificed about 50,000, the greater number in the semi-tribal regions of the extreme north. There were, perhaps, another 20,000 killed in other areas.

Thoughtful Indonesians are already beginning to fear that at least 500,000 orphans, widows and widowers, and sisters of the slain will some day seek to destroy a society they consider murderers.

One fact emerged from every discussion I had on the subject. The anti-Communist Indonesian army was the moving force, instigating and controlling the massacres.

The army was almost hysterically bent upon avenging the murders of six generals on the night of the unsuccessful coup. But the surviving generals were also forced to take that revenge or lose all standing within the officer corps and with the people.

The nation did not, however, run amok. The army was almost always in control, in most cases actually compelling civilians to murder. The Indonesian people did not, therefore, kill each other indiscriminately.

Horror stories have already appeared and will undoubtedly appear in increasing numbers in years to come, and they will be repeated in discussions around the evening fires until they become part of the country's folklore.

It is almost certain that, as one Indonesian student put it, "blood will cry out for blood, and the cry will be heard!"

Cambodia Fighting For Its Life

By JOSEPH KRAFT, from Phnom Penh, Cambodia

At this time of extreme confusion it is useful to look at Viet Nam through Cambodian eyes. For Cambodia is probably the only country in the world that cares as much as the United States about what is happening in Viet Nam.

The Cambodians, moreover, are just now developing a new policy toward Viet Nam that the United States might well consider. It is a policy of trying to play off the South Vietnamese Communist insurgents, or National Liberation Front, against the Communist government of North Viet Nam.

Cambodia's interest in Viet Nam is a simple matter of life or death. Since the Vietnamese first escaped from the Chinese thrall about three centuries ago, they have been steadily pressing away at Cambodia territory.

By 1850, they had taken from the Cambodians all of what is now the southern part of South Viet Nam. Only the French conquest of Indochina, including Laos, Viet Nam and Cambodia, arrested the complete annihilation of Cambodia by Viet Nam.

When French colonial rule in Indochina was ended at the 1954 Geneva conference, Cambodia was once again presented with the agonizing problem of how to survive against pressure from Viet Nam. Ever since then this country's astute leader, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, has been casting about for allies able to keep Viet Nam weak and divided and, as much as possible, non-Communist.

Initially the prince turned to the West. At Cambodian insistence the Geneva countries agreed that it would be advisable for Cambodia to receive outside military assistance.

Under that clause the prince set up a program of military aid from France and the United States. His government recognized the government of Saigon, not the Communist government of Ho Chi Minh in Hanoi.

In 1961 Prince Sihanouk rightly it seems to me, came to the conclusion that the American policy of trying to build military barriers against the spread of communism could not succeed in Southeast Asia.

In these circumstances, Prince Sihanouk did an about-face. Diplomatic recognition was withdrawn from Saigon and extended to Hanoi. China became, in Prince Sihanouk's own words, "friend No. 1."

The prince's hope was that China would prevail upon the Communists in the North Vietnamese government and in the South Vietnamese Liberation Front to guarantee Cambodia's present frontiers.

The result was a series of pleasant noises but not a conclusive guarantee of Cambodia frontiers. It is in these conditions that Prince Sihanouk has been working up his new policy of trying to set the South Vietnamese Liberation Front against the regime in North Viet Nam.

The heart of the new policy is to bring the National Liberation Front, or Viet Cong as it is often called, out into the open. Thus, just a year ago, the front leaders were given occasion to make their formal international bow at a conference of Indo-Chinese peoples held here in Phnom Penh under the sponsorship of Prince Sihanouk.

Among other things, the conference decided to establish a permanent secretariat, including a visible representative of the Viet Cong. The prospect is that the secretariat will be established in the next few weeks.

In the same vein, Prince Sihanouk has openly declared his "moral support" for the Liberation Front.

Insofar as possible, his government is trying to promote publicity for Tran Buu Kiem, the foreign minister, on the various occasions when he passes through Phnom Penh.

The calculation behind these moves is to bring the Liberation Front out into the open. There is a feeling in Phnom Penh that the front has been concentrating on military business to the exclusion of all other considerations.

The hope is that, with some exposure to the world at large, the front can be brought to think about something besides the fighting — about something, in fact, like an end to the fighting.

BACKGROUND

Develop A-Bomb Fast Nasser Tells Herr Pilz

By MAL D. STEWARD From Cairo

Egypt's President Gamal Abdel Nasser has a crash program to develop the atomic bomb.

If he succeeds, the balance of power in the Middle East will be radically upset.

The development of an operational atom bomb by the United Arab Republic would suddenly give the Arab states military superiority over Israel—provided, of course, Israel did not develop an atom bomb simultaneously.

Nasser wants an atom bomb and he is determined to have one.

Whether he succeeds depends in large measure on the success of Wolfgang Pilz, Hitler's V-2 rocket expert. Pilz has been secretly engaged on the project since 1958.

Until now the exact location of Pilz's atomic laboratories in Egypt has been unknown. Now, however, it can be disclosed they are in Factory No. 333 at Heliopolis, six miles northeast of Cairo.

A group of Pilz's old colleagues, who helped him on the V-2 rocket at Peenemunde, are again gathered around him and his project.

These German scientists are highly paid and enjoy special concessions from the Egyptian government.

The atom bomb project supervised by Pilz is but one of the "aces" Nasser believes he holds in his drive to unify all Arab nations under his leadership by using war against Israel as the rallying point.

Nasser once said, "Every one of us is able in his own way to perform a miracle."

Nasser appears to believe the miracle he can perform is the devastating defeat of Israel by Egyptian military forces in concert with the Arab nations who will support him in such an adventure.

Psychiatrists Report on Research Study

Hopelessness Breeds Disease

By RUDY ABRAMSON from New York

Helpless and hopelessness frequently conspire to set up unsuspecting victims for a frontal assault by disease, a psychiatric research team from the University of Rochester told the American College of Physicians here.

Having studied hundreds of patients and the circumstances which brought them to the hospital medical ward over the past 20 years, they have detected a pattern of capitulation to mental or emotional stress and physical illness.

Drs. George L. Engel and Arthur H. Schmale said this frequently takes the form of a dramatic change in the person's life. Feeling he can no longer cope with his existence, he gives up. Illness follows.

They said this is characterized by:

- Distress, unpleasant feelings often attributed to personal failures or deficiencies, and expressed in terms such as "It's too much. I can't take it any more."

- A feeling by the person that he is "less intact, less competent, less in control, less gratified, and less capable of functioning in his accustomed manner."

- A feeling that his environment or performance has changed, that successful performance in the past is no longer a useful guide for the future.

- A loss of continuity, an inability to project into the future with confidence, a bleak and unrewarding outlook.

- Revival of frustrating experiences of the past, allowing them to weigh heavily on the present.

In a study of 190 medical patients, Dr. Schmale said, the investigators found 80 per cent of them reported failing or "giving up" before the onset of their illness. A study by psychiatric patients revealed that 90 per cent of them experienced similar feelings.

"We are proposing," Engel said, "that giving up influences the individual's capacity to resist, whether it is to infection, diabetes, congestive heart failure or stroke.

In a study of 59 presumably healthy and normal individuals, the researchers found that 28 had been ill during the previous year, and that 16 of that 28 had experienced the feeling of giving up before their illness.

Police Guard Doors As Hitler Toasted

LONDON — More than 40 policemen guarded a South London bookshop as some 20 Fascist-minded persons inside drank toasts to Adolf Hitler.

About 150 demonstrators from Jewish and other groups demonstrated outside the bookshop at its celebration of Hitler's birthday. They carried signs saying, "Don't let it happen again."

One demonstrator was arrested after a brief scuffle with police. Hitler would have been 77 Thursday.

UNITED NATIONS — The United States and the Soviet Union have told U Thant they support him for a second term as United Nations secretary-general, authoritative sources said.

AMMAN, Jordan — King Hussein has instructed his government to grant Jordanian women the right to vote. He said he has asked the government to amend election laws to give women full election rights.

VANCOUVER — Lawrence Hoy was sentenced to 15 years in jail after being found guilty of possession of drugs for the purpose of trafficking. Hoy was arrested when police seized $3,500 worth of illicit heroin in a city apartment.

Governor Protected

SYDNEY (Reuters) — About 1,300 troops of the new Australian force for Viet Nam marched through Sydney Thursday in the biggest army parade seen here since the Korean war.

A tight security screen was placed around the New South Wales governor, Sir Roden Cutler, after a reported threat to assassinate him.

Detectives shadowed him from Government House to the city's town hall where he took the salute from the troops. But there were no incidents.

Slightly more than 100 members of the force left Tuesday by air for Viet Nam as an advance party. The others will go by sea and air during the next few weeks.

Hint Given House Committee

Underlying Conflicts Behind CBC Firings

OTTAWA (CP)—Hints of underlying ideological conflicts were placed before the Commons broadcasting committee Thursday as it delved into the shakeup on the network TV program This Hour Has Seven Days.

State Secretary LaMarsh expressed the hope a way will be found to solve a "basic conflict" between CBC management's right to manage and freedom for creative minds to create.

Patrick Watson, 38-year-old co-host of Seven Days, suggested the decision to drop him and colleague Laurier LaPierre, 38, from the show is only a symptom of loss of trust between producers and management.

Both witnesses called for restraint in efforts to resolve the dispute surrounding the Sunday night TV show.

Mr. LaPierre is to be heard later.

STRONG PROTEST — But Mr. Watson gave his account only after a strong protest from Liberal MP Ralph B. Cowan (York Humber).

He saw no reason for hearing the two CBC employees but, if they were to be heard, CBC management should appear first to be followed by the employees baying at the moon later.

"Which century are we sitting in?" asked David Lewis (NDP—York South) as Mr. Cowan said he believes in giving employees severance pay but no reasons for letting them go.

Mr. Cowan later blocked the committee's request in the Commons for permission to hold an afternoon session while the Commons was meeting. It required unanimous consent.

Questioned about reasons for his dismissal given by CBC General Manager H. G. Walker, Mr. Watson said management thought he had a chip on his shoulder, was anti-management, anti-president and perhaps anti-CBC.

Mr. Watson and his colleagues had felt the situation could be resolved by men of good will but senior management's feeling apparently had been so acute that they rejected consultation and made an arbitrary decision.

Network Denies Blacklist Claim

TORONTO (CP) — Television producer Ross McLean says he has been blacklisted by the CBC, but officials of the corporation deny it.

Mr. McLean made the charge on the Pierre Berton TV show, a daily program carried to a number of Canadian stations, Wednesday night. He said he'd been blacklisted for two years, and had been reduced to such odd jobs as producing commercials and being a consultant to Expo 67.

He said H. G. Walker, general manager of English language network broadcasting, told him there was no future for him at the CBC.

He said Mr. Walker seemed to want to remove "so-called creative geniuses who think they can say anything."

A spokesman in the CBC information services department said:

"We have no such thing as a blacklist. In fact, Mr. McLean has done two jobs for us recently."

Producer Called To Meeting

HALIFAX (CP) — Douglas Leithman, executive producer of the controversial television program This Hour Has Seven Days, has been asked to come to Halifax to meet the CBC board of directors today, a CBC spokesman said Thursday.

He said H. G. Walker, vice-president and general manager of English networks, is arranging for the meeting "at the request of the president," J. Alphonse Ouellet.

Mr. Leithman is directly responsible for the Seven Days, centre of dispute since dismissal of co-hosts Patrick Watson and Laurier LaPierre.

CBC directors began a three-day meeting here Wednesday. In Toronto, Mr. Leithman said he had plenty to tell the board.

Men Escape Boat Blast

VANCOUVER (CP) — Albert E. Simpson, 54, and Allan MacKinnon, 44, are reported in good condition in hospital after an explosion on Simpson's 35-foot cabin cruiser. Both men were on deck at the time of the explosion and officials said they would have been killed if they had been in the cabin at the time.

One of the statements the security officer, Helen McGarry, said the actress made was: "Other stores let me do this."

Three witnesses said Wednesday they had seen Miss Lamarr stuff the merchandise—25 items—into a shopping bag, then leave the store without paying.

Miss Lamarr has pleaded not guilty. Her lawyer, Jordan Wank, says the defence will be she suffered a mental lapse. The prosecution says she "systematically and methodically stole" from the store.

Lamarr's Words Admissible

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Statements actress Hedy Lamarr, 51, is alleged to have made before her arrest on a charge of petty theft will be admissible evidence, her trial judge ruled Thursday.

Municipal Judge Erich Auerbach refused Wednesday to accept as evidence statements which a May Co. department store security officer said Miss Lamarr made before she was arrested for taking $36 in merchandise Jan. 27, Thursday, he reversed his ruling.

25 ITEMS — One of the statements the security officer, Helen McGarry, said the actress made was: "Other stores let me do this."

Birthday Bonanza

ROME (AP) — The government of Rome celebrated the city's 2,719th birthday Thursday by opening three public parks, a park addition, a waterworks, an automobile underpass and a traffic lights system.

Bomb Aboard Train Kills 55 in India

NEW DELHI (AP) — Tribal rebellion in eastern India's jungle has burst into violence with the dynamiting of a passenger train that killed at least 55 and injured 120.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government announced a powerful time bomb blew the roof off a passenger coach standing in Assam state's Lumding railway station.

Reports from Calcutta said Naga tribesmen were blamed for the disaster.

CONVENIENCE QUALITY SATISFACTION

Car Chase 'Murderous'

A youth told police he wanted to kill himself after he led them a "murderous" chase which ended only after his car was rammed by a police car to stop it, magistrate's court was told Thursday.

Paul Henry Davidson, 19, of 517 Kelvin, was sentenced to two consecutive terms of four months after he pleaded guilty to criminal negligence and driving while his licence was suspended.

Passing sentence, Magistrate William Ostler said: "This murderous driving constitutes one of the worst cases I've ever heard."

THREE-YEAR BAN

As well as the eight-month jail sentence, Davidson has his licence suspended for a further three years, in agreement with a submission by prosecutor Peter Birkett.

Sentence was passed after court was read a record of convictions of driving without due care and attention, speeding and two minor traffic offences.

Davidson pleaded guilty to both counts.

Mr. Birkett told court Davidson was first noticed by an Esquimalt patrol car when a can went out of control as it turned off Macaulay to Dunsmuir just as it met the police car.

MISSED CHILDREN

The driver ignored police attempts to flag him down and accelerated to about 70 miles an hour through two more stop signs on Dunsmuir.

In the ensuing three-mile chase, the car "narrowly missed several young children" on two occasions, caused a motorcyclist to leap from his machine "and run for cover," tried to force the police car off the road at 80 miles an hour and ran nine stop signs, a stop light and a railway crossing.

Court was told the chase reached speeds of up to 75 miles an hour before Esquimalt Constable Douglas Sproston stopped the car by deliberately ramming it with his cruiser.

SEVEN PASSENGERS

During this time, there were seven other persons in the fleeing car.

Constable Sproston told court he had "known Paul for several years" during which time "his general character was good, as far as I'm concerned."

After hearing the evidence, Magistrate Ostler told defence counsel Jack Gatehouse: "I can't think of any occasion when counsel has had a worse problem to say anything."

QUARREL WITH WIFE

Mr. Gatehouse explained that Davidson earlier had had "a very serious domestic quarrel with his wife" of 2½ years, after which she left, taking with her their two-year-old son.

"He ill-advisedly went on a drunken binge," Mr. Gatehouse said. "He took his brother-in-law's car, met the others drinking and, when he saw police approaching, realized what great difficulty he was in."

After his arrest, Mr. Gatehouse said, Davidson was "a very apologetic person... full of remorse."

TRAGIC POINT

"The ironical and tragic point of the thing is that, while he was away, his wife had misgivings and had returned home."

Asking for a suspended sentence, the lawyer said that, if freed, Davidson would be at sea for the next seven months at his new job.

An apparent crackdown on impaired drivers continued as Magistrate Ostler sentenced one man to 45 days and laced three others with heavy fines.

Loring Carlsen, 27, Erie, was sentenced to 45 days when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving Wednesday after police saw a minor accident at Government and Pandora.

Court was told he turned onto Pandora and staggered on the road after leaving his car.

EXPECTED

He acknowledged previous convictions for impaired driving (20 days), intoxication (seven days) and failing to remain at the scene of an accident (five days).

A breathalyzer reading of .18 was taken.

When warned that the Crown would be seeking a stiffer penalty this time, court was told Carlsen said: "Yes... I have been expecting it."

Archibald Hoggan, 22, of 710 Kings, was fined $50 when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving after he hit a power pole at Currie and Island and required two stitches in his nose.

"The real question is whether you should go to jail without option of a fine, with driving of that kind," Magistrate Ostler said.

Court was told Hoggan was seen Wednesday to drive onto the sidewalk while travelling north on Powl Bay, later weaving from side to side at 50 to 60 miles an hour on Granite before the accident.

A breathalyzer reading of .18 was taken.

Harold M. Kerr of Vancouver was fined $350 after court was told he struck a parked car and later drove into the Oak Bay Beach Hotel Wednesday.

Kerr pleaded guilty to impaired driving but said, "I can assure you, I had five bottles of beer."

He blamed a defect in his car. Magistrate Ostler noted a breathalyzer reading of .22.

Patrick Joseph Coyle, 1231 Pembroke, was fined $400 when he pleaded guilty Wednesday to impaired driving after a car he was driving was in collision with another on Pandora.

Court was told Coyle's car crossed the centre line.

"Satisfied that at the outset neither intended to commit a criminal offence, Magistrate Ostler suspended sentences of Monty Smith and Gary Warrington, who earlier jointly pleaded guilty to theft by conversion.

Court was told the two rented a car March 11 from Yukon Motors in Whitehorse and later tried to sell or trade it in Victoria.

They were ordered to restore $300 rental, were placed on $500 bond and 18 months probation.

LOST HEADS

Sentencing the pair Thursday, Magistrate Ostler said: "I am satisfied that at the outset neither of you intended to convert this car to your own use."

"But somewhere you lost your heads."

"This alleviates the circumstances to a substantial degree. I'm certain neither of you is a criminal."

Dale Shaben of Calgary is "a classic example" of a vagrant, said Magistrate Ostler, finding the 18-year-old guilty of "a dissolute and wayward life with no roots and no plans for your future."

He remanded the youth to April 28 for sentence saying: "There is no point in punishing a boy of your age. We will see what kind of a plan the probation officer can arrange."

Shaben was arrested at 4:45 a.m. Tuesday in the Melrose Cafe on Yates, after telling a city policeman he had been "just bumming around" since before Christmas.

Police said the conversation disclosed Shaben was familiar with six Victorians who have criminal records.

Police said he had joined a "sex club" in Calgary and become involved in "gang warfare" and that Shaben said it wasn't safe for him to go back.

CBC Firings Protested

A telegram has been sent to State Secretary Judy La March from Victoria Labor Council protesting the firings of This Hour Has Seven Days' co-hosts Patrick Watson and Laurier LaPierre.

The telegram urges Miss La March to take action to reinstate the two personalities.

Telegrams have also been sent to Victoria MP David Green and Esquimalt MP George Chatterton, urging them to make similar pleas.

Increase Very Small

Output of Plywood 'Disappointing'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A "disappointing reduction" in anticipated 1965 plywood output was reported here Thursday by N. D. Cameron, president of the Plywood Manufacturers Association of B.C.

Mr. Cameron, a Victoria manufacturer, told the association's annual meeting here that 12 companies operating 18 mills produced 1,504,000,000 square feet of plywood during 1963. He said production was down during the first half of the year, but recovered in the second half. He described the net gain in production, 1.5 per cent, as a disappointing reduction in the anticipated seven per cent increase.

The PMBC president said plywood faces increasing competition in Canada and abroad. He said 20 per cent of the plywood produced in this province is exported, most of it to Great Britain.

Try Bonded Stock on a friend without letting him see the label.

It's the best way to find out what people really think about a whisky: how do they like it when they don't know which brand they're drinking?

If you've tried Bonded Stock yourself, the playback won't surprise you. Bonded Stock is a great Canadian whisky. You can conceal the label but you can't disguise the flavour. It's an extremely mellow whisky with a deceptively smooth flavour that dyed-in-the-wool whisky drinkers love.

So if you know someone who buys whisky by labels, introduce him to flavour. Bonded Stock flavour. He'll never look back.

Wage Talks Bog Down

KITIMAT (CP) — Contract negotiations between the Aluminum Company of Canada and 1,700 members of the United Steelworkers of America (USWA) collapsed here Thursday after two months of talks.

A spokesman for local 5115 of the union said the steelworkers will ask the provincial labor department to appoint a conciliation officer.

The steelworkers, employed at the Alcan smelter here, are asking an across-the-board increase of $1.10 per hour spread over two years.

The company has offered 45 cents per hour over a three-year contract.

Cabinet To Hear Ship Plea

Representatives of the 3,000-member B.C. Shipbuilding Workers Federation were granted an appointment Thursday to appear before the provincial cabinet on April 28.

The federation, which has strongly criticized the federal government's shipbuilding policies, is seeking provincial government backing for its demands that Vancouver harbor be improved and that more ships be built on the West Coast.

Reviewing the basic objectives of the program, Mr. Graham emphasized, "We are not trying to create little Rambrands. Only a few will continue on to paint, but the great majority will not. What we are trying to do here, and right through the whole program, is to keep alive their creativity."

He added, "If we can build confidence in the four to six bracket so that they know they can create, then this creativity spills over into other fields of activity."

Children first started painting at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria in 1951, when it was decided to hold a Saturday morning class.

Mr. Graham was living in the building at the time. He announced enrollment for 9 a.m. on a first come, first served basis.

Doors Stormed

Just after 7 a.m. on the day, Mr. Graham was awakened by a crowd of some 50 people outside the gallery, determined their children were going to take part.

In the present series, 150 children are taking the gallery's physical capacity to accommodate them.

The instructors are artists themselves, and have experience in teaching children.

Most instructors agree that working with the classes provides a constant source of inspiration. The children do things naturally that many sophisticated artists strive for. This is not a large exhibition, but it is well worth a visit.

The new branch will be asked to assess the impact of automation and technological changes and recommend training program adjustments or remedial action, said Mr. Peterson.

VIEWS OF SPORT

By Red Smith

It was 11:20 on the eve of the Mets' first exhibition game in St. Petersburg and one of the literary set quatered in the team's beach-front motel was just finishing his daily run at the Nobel Prize. The typewriter went tap-tap swiftly for comparatively easy words like "is" and tap-peck-tap, with long pauses, on big ones like "but."

The telephone rang and a young voice, evidently calling from the next room, protested apologetically that the racket was sleeping difficult. "You see," explained the caller, "we have a game to play tomorrow."

"Sorry," said the disturber of the peace, "I'm just finishing." He looked at his watch.

"Lord, I'm getting old," he muttered. "The ball players I used to travel with never knew there was such an hour as 11:20 a.m. or p.m."

He was thinking of the days when a ball game started at 3 p.m. and was over by 5. At 11:20 p.m. a player would be tipping down the hotel fire escape, outward bound to seek adventure. At 11:20 a.m. he might open one eye.

The Creative Urge

There have been some changes about Tim Hurst, the old umpire, laid down the dictum, "You can't beat them hours," and that is the theme of a magazine piece by Jim Brosnan, who used to be a sort of free lance pitcher and now is a free lance writer.

As a pitcher, Jim wasn't a free lance by choice. He is a large, amiable, four-eyed, pipe-smoking martini man out of Xavier College in Cincinnati, whose literary leanings made his employers nervous. General managers of ball clubs aren't especially upset if a player can spell out Dick Tracy at breakfast, but they are suspicious of an athlete who can read social significance into Pogo and Brosnan overstepped all bounds. He not only read entire books with hard covers and no pictures, he wrote 'em.

Consequently, in nine big league summers he worked for the Chicago Cubs, the St. Louis Cardinals, the Cincinnati Reds, and the Chicago White Sox.

His first book, "The Long Season," had a mixed reception. Some reviewers hailed it as witty, perceptive, outspoken, realistic, full of rare insights and humor. On the other hand some shared the view of Sully Hemus, Brosnan's manager in St. Louis, who did not come off the pages as an American folk hero.

Asked what he thought of the work, Sully said, "He's the first pitcher I ever heard of who won nine games and felt he had to write a book about it."

Jim's Long Season

Jim's magazine piece is shorter than the book, but it is entitled "It's a Long, Long Season," which suggests that somebody is in a rut. It says the ball player's lot is not a happy one. It says ball players get tired.

"Of all professional sports," Jim contends, "baseball, while the least arduous, is the most fatiguing."

Citing such supporting evidence as occasional collapses by Willie Mays, Brosnan mentions night games, jet travel, defeat on the field, and adverse criticism in the press as factors that combine to wear a man down. He says it's better to get booted in the afternoon because harsh sounds carry more clearly in night air.

He argues that there are too many games in a season, too many miles to travel, and too many losers in a 161-game league.

Generally speaking, he is right. He pointed out that doctors have been studying something called jet lag, which refers to the effects of long, fast travel on the body. Businessmen whose jobs keep them jumping across three or four time zones in a single night know that sometimes they need a day or two to get their insides adjusted to new eating and sleeping schedules, and they don't have to hit a curve.

Root of the Trouble

Everybody except the club owners agrees that 162 games are too many. Brosnan says the reason for increasing the old 154-game schedule was to give the fans eight more opportunities to pay the additional travel costs incurred when the leagues expanded to California.

Most big league teams encounter bad weather at the start of the season because play begins too early in the year. Trying to open later and still crowd in 162 games would increase the burden of doubleheaders, which is already too great. Cutting the schedule to 144 games—16 with each rival instead of 18—would seem to be an obvious solution. But try to get Walter O'Malley to give up one of his nine juicy date with the Giants in Chavez Ravine.

Players would benefit physically by a slightly more leisurely working schedule, and the chances are fans would see uniformly better baseball. Owners would suffer horribly, though. On days when the turnstiles aren't clicking, the alliance drives them mad.

Lions May Move

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. for this year's training program. The main requirements, he said, are a first-class playing field, with housing and food nearby.

Inquiries have been made at several other towns on the Island, at Abbotsford and at Nelson. The Lions usually start their training around the first of July.

Empress Meet In Crucial Spot

Vancouver's Herb Frix moved into the semi-final play for the Sir Edward Beatty trophy at the 36th annual Empress golf tournament at Victoria Golf Club.

Two Portland shotmakers, Rudy Taggart and two-time champion Pross Clark, face each other in today's action. Ken Crowshaw of Calgary is the other semi-finalist.

Women's medalist and one-time Empress champion, Mrs.

Gordon Verley of Vancouver, was eliminated from final play by Mrs. C. A. Rickson of Portland. Mrs. Rickson was one up on her opponent.

Last year's women's champion, Mrs. John Flynn of Portland, defeated Mrs. Dave Nurse of Seattle in last year's final.

In women's first flight semi-finals, Mrs. Stan Garred of Vancouver ousted her Marine Drive clubmate Mrs. C. G. Innes, 2-1.

Grimness Grips Leafs After Loss

By JIM TANG

SAN FRANCISCO — There is no feeling of panic but there is a certain grimness about the Victoria Maple Leafs following their 3-2 overtime defeat by the San Francisco Seals Wednesday night which quashed their Western Hockey League semi-final at 2-2.

A determined, fired-up crew after a team meeting Wednesday morning, the Leafs came up with a fine effort only to find it not quite enough as the Seals responded with what was their best performance in 18 games this season against the Leafs. It was a result which could lift the winners and leave the losers dejected, and there lies the big danger for the Leafs.

However, there was still solace for the positive thinker and Victoria-coach Frank Mario found it.

"One thing about it," he said yesterday, "is that the Seals cannot play any better hockey than they did Wednesday night as we stayed with them right into overtime. And we can do better."

Mario would name no names but it was a fact that the Leafs just missed with at least four of them considerably below par and contributing little to Wednesday's effort.

That brought up the subject of possible lineup switches, and there is every chance that the Leafs may try one or two different alignments for tonight's 6th game at the Cow Palace.

"We have to make some changes and I think you will see some," Mario said yesterday. He refused to share his thinking but it appears that the most likely switch is the moving of Larry Kozan between Lou Jankowski and Gordie Redahl with John Seaver moving in between Dick Lamoureux and Mike Labadie.

And that could be just about where it ends. Mario is limited in the moves he can make by a lack of depth. He can hardly split up his first line of Milan Marcetta, Bob Barlow and Andy Heberton and his only spare forward is rookie-centre Dave Parenteau.

Sadly missed is Steve Witluk, who has seen no playoff action because of a knee injury. Witluk had only six goals during the season but the peppery veteran was often a sparkplug, played well as a penalty-killer and was available to fill in on any line on the right side, where the Leafs have been hurting.

"Without Steve we have no flexibility at all," Mario says. "I'm going to have to try something new but there aren't too many changes I can make."

There was, however, some good news for the Leafs yesterday. Defenceman Aut Erickson came back from X-rays with the news that the little toe on his left foot wasn't broken after all.

Erickson was hit midway through the first period by a puck shot by Tom Thurlby and it was at first feared the toe was broken. He was limping yesterday but is expected to be able to take his regular turn tonight.

And so is Jankowski, whose left leg stiffened yesterday after being banged against a goal-post Wednesday. The leftwinger, one of the more solid performers Wednesday although he failed to get away a good shot, was also hobbling a bit yesterday but the injury seems no more than a bruise on the calf of the leg which should work out.

Another factor, although it isn't one which necessarily will improve the Leafs' chances, is that they probably have seen the last of Marcel Pelletier for this series.

The stand-by goalkeeper for the playoffs, Pelletier, was permitted to fill in for the Seals after the first game because the San Francisco club didn't have a professional netminder available.

That situation changed Wednesday night, however, when Oklahoma City Blazers won the Central League playoff championship. That made Doug Favell available to the Seals and meant that the Leafs can no longer use Pelletier.

Whether Favell will be here in time to play tonight couldn't be ascertained last night. But if he isn't, the Leafs will have to use either Bob Gray, the amateur who played the first game of the series, or regular Jack McCartan, who is skating lightly but not yet over a knee injury.

STAMPS SIGN

LINEBACKER

CHALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampers of the Western Football Conference today announced the signing of outside linebacker Jerry Campbell, 21, from the University of Idaho.

Campbell, six feet and 208 pounds, is the eighth new player and seventh import signed by Stampers. He was a Washington State high school star in 1961 and was named to the all-conference college team last year.

Mount View is rightly deserving of its title as Vancouver Island rugby champions.

After finishing third in league play, behind Mount Doug and first place Claremont, the Hornets and Mount Doug met in a playoff to decide who would meet Claremont in the final for the Howard Russell Cup, emblematic of high school rugby supremacy in Victoria.

Mount View's victories are now history, as the Hornets defeated Mount Doug in the playoff and then went on to defeat Claremont in the Cup final.

Yesterday's victory over Brentwood was a great morale builder for all local high schools as well as Mount View, as Brentwood's rugby fame is known far and wide.

Blake ran his team through a game-like, 90-minute workout, as he cracked the whip and watched his players respond as though they were facing the Wings.

The Montreal coach continued to juggle his forward alignments, but said after the practice that Richard's spirited showing may influence his starting assignments Sunday.

SOME CHANGES

"I'll likely start Richard with Dick Duff and Bob Rousseau on the wings," Blake said. "But I won't hesitate to move Ralph Backstrom in there in place of Richard if I have to."

Backstrom regularly plays with wingers Claude Larose and John Ferguson, but when Richard was injured in the Toronto series, Blake inserted him at the centre slot between Duff and Rousseau and the line was flying.

Claude Provost, the right winger who drew the assignment of checking Chicago Black Hawks' Bobby Hull and Toronto's Frank Mahovlich all season, doesn't think it will be any soft touch against Detroit.

SOFT ICE

In Detroit, Red Wings went back to work Thursday in preparation for the opening of the Stanley Cup playoff final in Montreal Sunday afternoon but were not happy with the condition of their home ice.

The Red Wings skated for about an hour on somewhat soft ice and some of the players asked jokingly why they had to work in a swimming pool.

Detroit officials explained that new heating and air conditioning equipment was being tested, especially the latter, and that someone had failed to consider the effect it might have on the ice.

career record against the Mets, was saved by Curt Flood's two-run homer in the ninth.

With one out in the ninth, Lou Brock singled and Flood hit his first homer of the season, much to the dismay of the Mets, who now own a 2-3 record.

Mount View player snowed under by Brentwood

Island Rugby Championship

Hornets Lose Lead But Win Cup

By JOHN BALLOCH

Mount View Hornets captured the Island's high school rugby crown and the Thomson Trophy with an exciting, 16-11, overtime victory over Brentwood College at Macdonald Park yesterday.

Rated as underdogs and up against Brentwood's great rugby tradition, the Hornets led 11-0 at half-time as Ron Canton scored a try, Denis Somner converted and then scored minutes later on a penalty kick.

It may have been tradition or the wind blowing in its favor, but Brentwood came back fired up in the second half and ran over its rivals to tie the score at 11-11 and force the game into overtime.

FIRST TRY

Miles Dobson scored Brentwood's first try early in the half. Mount View's defence seemed to collapse after the shock of Dobson's effort and Malcolm Graham and Rick Rollins found openings, each scoring a try and putting College back in the game. Dal Williams converted Rollins' try.

With only seconds left in the first half of overtime and the play deep in Brentwood's half of the field, Mount View's Dave Hutchings picked up the ball from a set scrum and raced over from 20 yards to put the Hornets ahead. Somner converted and it was game over for the gallant but beaten Brentwood club.

Mount View is rightly deserving of its title as Vancouver Island rugby champions.

After finishing third in league play, behind Mount Doug and first place Claremont, the Hornets and Mount Doug met in a playoff to decide who would meet Claremont in the final for the Howard Russell Cup, emblematic of high school rugby supremacy in Victoria.

Mount View's victories are now history, as the Hornets defeated Mount Doug in the playoff and then went on to defeat Claremont in the Cup final.

Yesterday's victory over Brentwood was a great morale builder for all local high schools as well as Mount View, as Brentwood's rugby fame is known far and wide.

Blake ran his team through a game-like, 90-minute workout, as he cracked the whip and watched his players respond as though they were facing the Wings.

The Montreal coach continued to juggle his forward alignments, but said after the practice that Richard's spirited showing may influence his starting assignments Sunday.

SOME CHANGES

"I'll likely start Richard with Dick Duff and Bob Rousseau on the wings," Blake said. "But I won't hesitate to move Ralph Backstrom in there in place of Richard if I have to."

Backstrom regularly plays with wingers Claude Larose and John Ferguson, but when Richard was injured in the Toronto series, Blake inserted him at the centre slot between Duff and Rousseau and the line was flying.

Claude Provost, the right winger who drew the assignment of checking Chicago Black Hawks' Bobby Hull and Toronto's Frank Mahovlich all season, doesn't think it will be any soft touch against Detroit.

SOFT ICE

In Detroit, Red Wings went back to work Thursday in preparation for the opening of the Stanley Cup playoff final in Montreal Sunday afternoon but were not happy with the condition of their home ice.

The Red Wings skated for about an hour on somewhat soft ice and some of the players asked jokingly why they had to work in a swimming pool.

Detroit officials explained that new heating and air conditioning equipment was being tested, especially the latter, and that someone had failed to consider the effect it might have on the ice.

career record against the Mets, was saved by Curt Flood's two-run homer in the ninth.

With one out in the ninth, Lou Brock singled and Flood hit his first homer of the season, much to the dismay of the Mets, who now own a 2-3 record.

OUTDOORS

with Alec Merriman

Grilse or blueback fishing can come pretty costly these days, if you are one of those who try to get away with taking more than your limit of four salmon, any day.

Two Vancouver fishermen and one Port Alberni fisherman were each fined $200 in Nanaimo last Friday for taking more than their limit. The two Vancouver fishermen had 35 grilse in their possession. In another case fisheries officers found grilse hidden away in rubber boots and other hiding places in a boat. In addition to the fines, gear and boats may be confiscated.

These were flagrant cases of exceeding the catch limits. We suspect that there are other anglers who feel they are starved most of the year for salmon, so why should they stop at four on the odd occasion when they find fish?

There is a very good reason. The four-fish limit isn't something that was set arbitrarily by the fisheries department just to make it tough for sports fishermen. The sports fishermen themselves asked for a cutback in the grilse catch because they feared the depletion of salmon stocks and sought to do their part towards conservation.

The fines for exceeding the catch limits point out there is some excellent bluebacking around . . . below Rock Bay, north of Campbell River, Comox beluway, off Northwest Bay and Lantzville, off Nanaimo, Portlier Pass, Tent Island, Maple Bay and in Saanich Inlet.

Hottest bluebacking is in mid-island regions. In Saanich Inlet there is still bluebacking off Goldstream Island, Willis Point, McKenzie Bay, Saanous Island and Mill Bay, but they are getting spotty and few limit catches are being taken. A few springs are being taken in Saanich Inlet.

Oak Bay is producing some fair spring fishing and some bluebacks off Discovery Light, in Basanout Bay, The Gap and along the golf links. Some blues and jacks are being taken in Victoria waters. At Port Renfrew the big springs are starting to show, but generally it has been too rough to fish them.

Cold and windy weather last weekend and early this week didn't help trout fishing. Cowichan Lake had a setback after a spell of pretty good fishing.

A few days of hot weather should see it pick up in time for April 30 when there will be two trout derbies on Cowichan Lake. The AOTS will hold its annual derby, open to all corners on the day, and RCN Anglers' Association will hold a members' derby the same day in waters from the Narrows to the weir.

The King Fisherman Contest also opens April 30. The RCN derby will be dawn to 2 p.m., with weigh-ins at Bert Dodd's cabin between Honeyman Bay and Gordon Bay where he will have a trailer on the lakeshore flying a flag. All that is required to weigh in is a 1966 membership card.

John Rbert reports all Campbell River area lakes producing trout now for worm and bobber fishermen, trollers and spin-casters. Spring salmon are being taken right in front of Campbell River.

Cowichan River gave up an eight-pound brown from below the power line off Gibbons Road Sunday. River estuaries are all producing outthroats on right tides. Sproat Lake, Somass and Stamp Rivers are providing good trout fishing.

The road into Matheson Lake, off the Rocky Point Road on the right just before turnoff to Pedder Bay Marina, is now completed. There is no boat ramp and you have to carry your boat about 200 yards to the lake, but we have heard of one good-sized bass being taken from shore.

Youngsters have been having fun catching white perch under Parson's Bridge by the Six Mile House.

Monday's meeting of the Victoria Fish and Game Club's Fishing Chapter will feature estuary outthroat trout fishing with Bud Dunnett and Arthur Mayne o take part in a panel discussion. Meeting will be 8 p.m. at the Burnside Forest Research Laboratory, 506 Burnside West.

Sanders Two Up in Dallas Irons Help Lead

DALLAS (AP)—Doug Sanders' irons carried him to a four-under par 67 and the first-round lead in the $25,000 Dallas Open Thursday as the Dallas pro found the 6,323-yard Oak Cliff Country Club course to his liking. Sanders, leading money and tournament winner of the year, had no problem with the stiff wind. "But the course always is good when you score well," he grinned.

Sanders, co-favorites with Gay Brewer to win the $15,000 first money, finished with a two-stroke lead over Miller Barber of San Antonio, Texas, Ken Stib of Tacoma, Wash., and Bob Goalky of Belleville, Ill. Brewer, also from Dallas, posted a 71. He was dogged by 12 other pros.

Short Putts Sink Marlene

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP)—Phyllis (Tish) Preuss chipped in for a birdie from 65 feet on the 20th hole to beat Mrs. Marlene Stewart Strelt of Fort Hill, Ont., after drawing even with 59-foot birdie putt on the 13th hole of their North and South Amateur Golf Tournament semi-final match Thursday.

The other final berth went to Mrs. Nancy Roth Syms, 6 and 8 winner over Mrs. Marlene Strelt of Newkirk, Pa. It set up an 18-hole all-Florida championship match today between the 27-year-old Curtis Cup teammates of 1964.

MEET OFTEN Both Floridians, Miss Preuss from Pompano Beach and Mrs. Syms from Hollywood, have been in the tournament finals three times in four years, each winning once. They met each other in 1963. When Mrs. Syms won 2 and 1.

Mrs. Strelt, North and South U.S. Amateur champion 10 years ago, swept the first three holes and the 33-year-old Canadian appeared on the way to an easy victory as Miss Preuss bequeathed each of the holes, three-putting twice.

Twice thereafter on the front nine she cut the margin to one hole, winning the short sixth when Mrs. Strelt missed a two-foot par putt.

A par 3 gave Mrs. Strelt the ninth hole and a 2-up lead, but she didn't win another hole. Only one hole was halved on the front nine of the 6,800-No. 2 Pinehurst Country Club course.

Miss Preuss won the 11th hole with a par when Mrs. Strelt was trapped with her second and the Florida blonde got even for the first time with a 59-foot birdie putt on the 13th.

The match then settled down to battle of five halved holes for the rest of the back nine. Mrs. Strelt lost a golden opportunity to forge ahead when she missed a birdie putt of about 1 1/2 feet on the 18th green.

After each parred the first extra hole, the break came on the par 4 second. Mrs. Strelt was on in two, some 30 feet from the hole and Miss Preuss was off the green, down a slight embankment where the ball had stopped off the carpet.

She took her No. 9 iron and popped the ball right at the hole. It nudged the flag stick and nestled into the cup for her winning margin.

Each shot 16, two over women's par for 18 holes. It was the second extra hole victory in four matches for Miss Preuss, National Amateur finalist five years ago.

Pick Pollock to Deal with Draft

MONTREAL (CP)—The governors of the National Hockey League will meet in Detroit, Friday, April 29, for further discussion of a plan to allocate players to the six new teams in the league's expansion program scheduled for the 1967-68 season.

President Clarence Campbell of the NHL said here Thursday that the coming session will be a follow-up to an April 5 New York meeting when a report on the subject was presented, but no decision was reached.

"The report merely provided an outline on how the new draft will be carried out," Campbell said. "There may be some interim statement made after the Detroit meeting, but I don't think the report will be published as the governors feel it should go to the new franchise holders before it is made public."

Campbell said that Sam Pollock, general manager of Montreal Canadiens, had been selected by the six current team owners as the person best suited to deal with the allocation of players to the new teams.

Six United States cities—St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, St. Paul and San Francisco—will join the league starting in the fall of 1967.

Canada's Olympic Stock Climbs

Americans Boost Banff

By JOHN FARROW

ROME (AP) — Banff's chances of getting the 1972 Winter Olympics rose today as a combined United States-Canadian ski federation called on American delegates to support the Canadian bid over that of Salt Lake City, Utah.

The appeal came from the Pacific Northwest Ski Area Federation, made up of 20 members from Oregon, Washington and Idaho, and eight from Alberta and British Columbia.

"We'll remember this," said Utah Governor Calvin Rampton. "It's shocking."

"Quite unpatriotic, I would say," said General Maxwell E. Rich, chairman of the Salt Lake City Olympic Committee. "Sounds almost unbelievable."

NO COMMENT

Delegates from Sapporo, Japan, and Lahti, Finland, the others bidding for the games, and Banff made no comment.

But the fact that even some American ski villages, no matter how small, were prepared to go against the wishes of their own Olympic committee left people saying that Banff's chances of getting the Games were becoming steadily brighter.

The decision on the Winter Games site will be announced by the International Olympic Committee next Wednesday. The decision on the Summer Games site also will be announced then.

SUMMER BIDS

Montreal, Munich, West Germany, Detroit and Madrid are bidding for the Summer Games. Mystery still surrounded Madrid's bid. Rumors suggested Madrid would withdraw but work started Thursday night on the Spanish exhibit.

Col. Di Benito, technical director of the Spanish exhibit, described as "sheer nonsense."

LACROSSE PRACTICE

Bantam and midget lacrosse players will combine for a workout at Stevenson Park tonight, starting at 6 p.m.

reports that Spain would withdraw for lack of financial support.

The U.S.-Canadian ski federation suggested in a letter received by Douglas Roby, U.S. IOC delegate, that the IOC would be unlikely to grant any Winter Olympics site in the United States so soon after the Winter Games at Squaw Valley, Calif., in 1960.

The federation argued it would be better for the United States to back Banff as an "international sign of goodwill" and so win friends for Salt Lake City's bid in the future.

"It's certainly a strange business," said Roby. "Of course it will make no difference to my vote."

LATE START

"Salt Lake City is the official United States nomination and I'm impressed with the facilities they've got to offer."

"But we've got to admit that Utah got a late start—they didn't get the nomination until Jan. 15—and maybe they're trailing from a propaganda point of view."

"Maybe they won't get the Games this time. But they'll get them sometime for sure."

PEGS BANFF

As Banff's prospects seemed to soar, a pessimistic tone was sounded for Sapporo by its mayor, Yosuka Harada.

Arriving here with other Japanese officials Harada said:

"I'm not too optimistic. I'm afraid that several IOC delegates will not look with favor at the idea of letting Japan stage another Olympic Games only eight years after the Tokyo Games."

He thinks Banff will get the Winter Games, with Munich the probable winner of the summer site.

Star to Return After Illness

Victoria United, momentarily resting from its Pacific Coast Soccer League chores, plays the Victoria and District all-stars in an exhibition game Saturday afternoon at Heywood Park.

The 2 p.m. match is held annually for the Tony Hope Memorial Cup.

And the MacKay, United's promising rookie, is scheduled to return to the United lineup.

MacKay, who has been out of action for a month due to illness, is expected to see only limited action until he rounds into shape.

Left Half Tom Locke, who suffered a splintered bone in a shin three weeks ago, also will be back in the United lineup.

Two important District League games will be played Sunday. Luckies and Gorge play for the knockout championship at Heywood Park and Esquimalt plays Navy in a promotion-relegation game at Naden field.

Esquimalt topped the second division and Navy was last in the first division. A victory for Esquimalt would boost that club into the upper section for next season.

Speech Arts Hold Stage in First Festival Concert

By BERT BUNY
The first of four special evening concerts was staged by the Greater Victoria Music Festival Thursday night.

This was the Speech Arts Honor Performance Concert which opened before a good audience at 8 p.m. at Sir James Douglas Elementary school auditorium.

The opening section of the concert featured recital performances heard since Tuesday when speech arts competition started.

THREE CHOIRS
There were three speech choirs: the Jimmy Cricket Junior Primary, winners in the Kindergarten and Grade 1 section; Div. 12 at Victoria West, Grades 2 and 3, Uplands School, Grades 4 and 5.

Seven individual performers were also on the program, all winners in their classes: Kyra Smith and Suzanne Selmond with a duologue from A Midsummer Night's Dream; Catherine O'Connell in Public Speaking; Kathleen Masters with a monologue from Antigone; Rhonda Williams with the 24th Psalm; Shaghagh Hall with Kon Tiki; Janet Purcell reciting a poem of her own composition.

EIGHT CONTESTERS
There were eight selected contenders for the Audrey Johnson Award. This is a prize of $25 for the competitor, under 21, who, in the opinion of the adjudicator, shows high standard or great promise.

Ranging in age from below 10 to 15, the contenders were: Nona Avren, Sandra Howell, Wendy Copeland, Heather Fielding, Linda Patterson, Susan Bedford, Mark Perrins and Blake Carter.

Adjudicator Mrs. Jose Smith had a difficult task in selecting a winner but the nod went to Blake Carter, a winner in no fewer than four previous classes.

SHORTER SESSION
The evening piano session was certainly a lot shorter than those of the afternoon or morning.

The junior class was won by Denise Baker with 85 points over five competitors. There were 11 elementary entrants with Bill Patterson emerging at the top with 86 points.

Sharing top spot in the open piano class, judged by Mr. van Allen, were Alida Smith and Faith Webster with 85 marks.

There was an award, the J. Ingram Smith Prize, for the best operatic performance.

A field of seven young women Thursday night faced up to the score of 85 previously registered by Glen Atkinson in the male section. Mt. Atkinson's mark didn't stand up.

Married Smiths scored 87 to win both the female voice operatic class and the Ingram Smith award. Elizabeth Winter was second with 85 and Faith Webster third with 84.

Classes in piano and voice continued throughout the day while individual competitors in the speech arts division gave way to speech choirs who worked diligently, morning and afternoon, at the Sir James Douglas Elementary School auditorium.

The piano division required all day for just four classes but there were 103 entrants; under 9 and under 11 in the morning; under 10 and under 12 in the afternoon.

'GOING CONCERN'
Patricia Perrins, a consistently fine performer in both the vocal and speech arts sections, gathered another 87 in her quick study class Thursday morning.

Laura Gross, an intrepid rival for Patricia, was just a single point behind.

Another 87 went to Dena Noble in the folk song class, 14 or 15 years. Dena, incidentally, is without a doubt the type colloquially referred to as a "going concern", in addition to which asset she has a remarkable voice for her years.

TWO DOZEN
Nine young men, 12 or 13 years old, contested their vocal solo class. John McVie, whose name has become quite familiar in the winners' lists of late, won the class with 86, followed closely by Peter Dyson with 85.

An even two dozen pianists, all under nine years old, went resolutely after Jessie Purze's Catch as Catch Can in the morning piano session.

When it was all over, the biggest catch of all went to Karen McDonald, Roger Scoble and Benjamin Wood, each of whom landed an 88. Janice Noel, along with Robert Kidd and Peter Zacharkiw, caught 86 and Karen Denike an 85.

Karen, incidentally, is the daughter of bandmaster Howard Denike and well-known pianist Donna Denike.

SMITHERS (CP) — Smithers' unlucky Easter finally neared its conclusion Thursday when the Bulkley River was bridged by a temporary crossing—but there are still important jobs to do for the overworked engineering and works crews.

The Bailey Bridge, thrown up in 12 days to replace the bridge destroyed by an ice jam Good Friday, allows traffic to resume along the northern Trans-Provincial Highway. Only single-lane traffic will be allowed on the 12-foot-wide span.

Works superintendent Steve Svalatko paid tribute to a 20-man crew made up of men from Smithers, Terrace, Burns Lake and Prince George who put in more than 2,500 man-hours without mishap in the hazardous job of getting the 290-foot section of Bailey bridging in place.

SALVAGE PLAN
The bridging connects with 200 feet of the old bridge, left standing after two 145-foot sections were lifted off their piers and sent crashing half a mile downstream. Crews will start next week salvaging material from one of the spans.

The other was dynamited when it was feared it would drift farther downstream and possibly cause another ice jam.

A fire Good Friday destroyed the village's pump house, leaving the residents without water.

Later in the day, an emergency pump was installed, but it was several days before the water supply was back to anywhere near normal.

PUMP HOUSE PLAN
Plans are being drawn up for a new pump house, and are expected to be completed by late this month or early May.

A further complication developed April 10 when a main sewer line broke because of quicksand and threatened to pollute what little water there was. Pressure from this break resulted in another rupture of the line six days later. Officials said the two lines running through the village are being looped together to relieve any pressure caused by a similar break in future.

One of the three leaders, Benjamin Wood, is the son of pianist Robin Wood, now director of the Victoria School of Music.

In the under-11 piano class, Stephen Calder was out in front with 88. Ruth Copeland and Robert Calman tied for second place with 85 and James Robertson finished with 84.

There were three speech choirs to occupy the morning program at Sir James Douglas Elementary School.

Victoria West, Div. 12, took the Grades 2 and 3 class, one point ahead of both St. Margaret's School and Burnside.

Highest mark of the morning in speech arts, an 83, went to the Jimmy Cricket Junior Primary in the Kindergarten and Grade 1 section. In Grades 2 and 3, Uplands School, Div. 2, had it all to themselves and collected 80 points.

'EXCELLENT'
Speech choirs continued during the afternoon when an special highlight was provided by the drama class of Claremont Senior Secondary School.

"Their performance represented choral speaking at its best," said the adjudicator, Mrs. Jose Smith. "It was excellent."

The Claremont Speech Choir has been invited to appear at the Schools Honor Performance Concert on Friday, April 29.

UNCONTESTED
The only other speech arts class heard Thursday afternoon was for Grades 4 and 5. Uplands School came out heading the parade with 164 points; both James Bay, Div. 1, and Tillicum, Grade 5, earned 160. In the vocal division the afternoon session opened with four untested classes. Phyllis Pollard received 83 points for her folk song and 80 for her soprano solo. Rosemary Sims had 82 for her mezzo-soprano solo and 81 for her solo in an any voice class.

Last in the afternoon was a quick study class, under 14. "This was a very good class indeed," said adjudicator Wyndham Williams. "You'd think they'd been at it for months."

Actually, the contestants had the test piece in their hands for only two days.

BOYS WIN
The massive afternoon piano classes provide at least one singularity. There were 20 contestants in the under 12 category, 12 girls and eight boys.

Yet, when the smoke cleared, seven of the boys' list was a boy; six in all.

In class 105, under 10, all 27 entrants turned up; 18 girls and nine boys. Here the young ladies made a better showing with a first and a tied third to their credit.

CORRECTIONS
Two slight errors crept into the accounts Thursday. The winners of Class 78 for junior studio choirs were the Gladys Pearce Junior Studio Choir, not the Vera Barclay Choir as set out in the program. Most regrettably, Barclay choir accompanist James Saunders died suddenly at the weekend.

Second and third places in class 73 for duets were reserved for Jennifer Angus and Hilary Scott were second with 136 points while Hilary and Brian Groos were third with 165.

The din of battle is somewhat hushed today.

We have been charging indomitably on for the past four days at the rate of nine sessions a day and settling artistic differences and friendly rivalries among hundreds of assorted singers, pianists, speakers and accompanists.

All, surely, have gained by the experience and by the friendly and constructive advice given by the adjudicators, Mrs. Smith, Wyndham Williams, Mr. van Allen and Crawford Clarke.

"All you have to do," observed Mr. Williams on one occasion, "is to consider what you are told. You don't have to take our advice; but we do ask that you consider it."

THREE CAMPAIGNS
Today, there are but three campaigns, two in the piano division and one vocal. The piano session in the afternoon is, incidentally, scheduled to start at 2 p.m. Not the usual 1:30.

The vocal classes are all concerned with sight reading and quick study.

BOWL, MEDALLION
Competition for the B.C. Electric Rose Bowl and the City of Victoria Medallion—the first for singing and the second for piano—starts by guest artist pianist Robin Wood and selected outstanding performances of the week go on at the McPherson Playhouse.

Curtain time, however, is not as advertised. The Festival Highlights program starts at 8 p.m.

Morning and afternoon results, Speech Choirs:
Class 201, Grades 2 and 3-1, Victoria West, Div. 12, 81; 2, St. Margaret's School and Burnside School, equal, 80.
Class 202, Kindergarten and Grade 1, Jimmy Cricket Junior Primary, 81; 2, St. Margaret's School, 81; 3, St. Paul's School, 80.

French Organist at Cathedral

'Instant Symphony' Created

By WILLIAM THOMAS

What do you do when someone hands you a sheet of paper with three musical themes on it and a packed crowd sits waiting in keen anticipation? You have never seen the music before.

If you happen to be Pierre Cochereau you just look over the three themes and then sit down at your pipe organ and work out an extemporaneous four-movement symphony.

This is exactly what Mr. Cochereau did Thursday night at Christ Church Cathedral.

IMPASSIONED VIRTUOSO

Robin Wood, newly appointed director of the Victoria School of Music, wrote the three themes and then handed them to the visiting virtuoso who is resident organist at Notre Dame in Paris.

This tradition of rapid improvisation had produced some of the finest organ music known, as the works of J. S. Bach and his contemporary Dietrich Buxtehude give adequate proof.

Thursday night's results were equally exciting. By choice Pierre Cochereau opened his seventh North American tour with this concert in Victoria. After playing at Calgary he will travel to the United States to complete his 40 days of recital.

FRANCE MASTERS

His program offers the works of French masters in a representative selection from the 17th century master Louis Couperin to the contemporary Marcel Durufle.

Pierre Cochereau, a pupil of Durufle, offered the prelude and fugue on the name Alain. The work was produced to honor Jehan Alain, killed during the Second World War.

Pierre Cochereau said he had enjoyed his rehearsal on the cathedral organ. He pronounced the instrument in excellent voice and ideally suited to his style of playing.

FRANCAIS SUITE

Among the more modern composers represented in the recital the Suite Francaise by Jean Francaix was delightful. Francaix has worked extensively for the theatre and along with Robin Wood is numbered among the pupils of the famous Parisian teacher of composition, Nadia Boulanger.

Pope Names Texas Bishop

CHARRINGTON TOBY BEER...
BRITISH GOOD TASTE
The British are noted for good taste. And so is British beer. Does this mean that Charrington Toby has MORE good taste than Canadian brews? No. It simply means that British brewers like Charrington omit a great deal of the fuzz inherent in Canadian beer. And when interfering fuzz is removed, you get full flavor. THIS is how Charrington Toby achieves good taste: less gas... fuller flavor. Have a Toby!

City Seeks Regional Review

'Mountain of the Dead' Spurs Garbage Action

By A. H. MURPHY
Charges that a fly-infested "mountain of the dead" is being gnawed by rats at the city garbage dump was instrumental Thursday in the decision of council finance committee to seek an intermunicipal review of the whole question of garbage disposal.

The reference was to bodies of animals cast upon the dump. The decision was buttressed by a request from Reeve Hugh Curtis of Saanich that the matter be placed on the agenda of the next intermunicipal meeting, which will be held in the first week in May.

"The situation is terrible here. There should be collection twice a week, and everything should be taken, instead of one can or whatever it is they take now," said Ald. Clyde Savage. Grass cuttings and rubbish from gardens all should be taken away, the aldermen contended. People would be willing to pay more than they now do for the service. They would not resent a direct charge, he maintained.

NEXT MEETING

"I agree that the situation is not good, and that the disposal problem needs attention," said Mayor Toome. "We will go into it at the next intermunicipal meeting."

At present the city hauls 700 to 800 cubic yards of garbage daily to a dump at the west end of Hartland Road, which is off West Saanich Road but outside the boundaries of the municipality of Saanich.

DEAD ANIMALS

Neither this dump nor two others, both of which are in the Highlands area of Greater Victoria, is operated in a satisfactory manner, said Reeve Curtis in his letter and a better method of disposal, be it incineration or sanitary landfill, should be found.

Mrs. I. D. Woods, president, recently expressed the "disgust" of the Cats Protection League over the practice of taking the bodies of dead animals to the dump.

PROTEST LETTER

In a letter to the city manager, read at Thursday's meeting, she enclosed a letter from the league to Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, a senior medical health officer.

"I pictured the growing mountain of diseased, dead bodies at a garbage dump," said the letter, commenting on a report that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals had dumped 2,111 dead animals for disposal.

INCINERATOR

In addition, the letter pointed out, dead animals were dumped there from the area veterinary hospitals and by pet owners.

Why does Victoria not build a new, modern incinerator or crematorium to dispose of bodies without taking up additional space at the "mountain of the dead"? Mrs. Woods asked.

DISEASE THREAT

"Scavenger birds could suffer or spread disease germs. Rats will spread disease from such a dump. Wild life in the area will suffer, and if this is allowed to go on indefinitely, the human population will suffer. What about disease during and after wars that has spread from battlefields?" the letter asks.

Another aspect was the bad publicity the city could suffer. Could one visualize Victoria, the city of gardens, being labelled "mountain of the dead"?

Pearkes Elected 'Grand President'

Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes, awarded the Victoria Cross for action in First World War, was elected grand president at the Royal Canadian Legion's 21st annual convention in Montreal Thursday.

Ronald E. MacBraith, 55, of Moncton, N.B., was unanimously elected president. He succeeds Fred T. O'Brecht, 56, of Durham, Ont.

Sidney Drops Deputy Clerk, Hikes Own Pay

By TIM GLOVER

After dismissing their deputy clerk "for economy reasons" Sidney council Wednesday night raised the chairman's annual salary by $500 and each commissioner's salary by $200.

Deputy clerk Glenn Fell said Thursday night that he was very shocked by the decision but would make no further comment.

Chairman A. W. Freeman said that council had voted for Mr. Fell's dismissal because of reasons of economy.

STatement
"I will be making a public statement on Monday," he said. "I don't know how you got this information at this time."

"I would far rather have made a statement through a prepared press release."

Mr. Freeman said that the increase in salaries for the chairman and the commissioners was within the bounds set by the Municipal Act.

SPECIAL MEETING

"Of course, there are some members who do not draw this money," he said. Mr. Freeman refused to comment any further on the council decision.

The council motion, passed at a special meeting Wednesday, was moved and seconded by Commissioners H. E. Rasmussen and John Boshier.

It is understood that Sidney council clerk A. W. Sharp is near retirement. Mr. Fell was the most likely successor, and was being trained for this post.

"I will do everything I can for this person," said Chairman Freeman. "I hope we can work something out for him before Monday."

Sidney council meets in open session at the municipal hall Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Traffic Board Suggested By Planners

The creation of a metropolitan traffic board as part of Greater Victoria's regional services was suggested at Thursday night's planning seminar of the Capital Region Branch of the Community Planning Association. Transportation and traffic were discussed at the second panel meeting of four being sponsored by the association.

TWO SYSTEMS

A complete transport system, encompassing both highways and transit systems is required to meet the ever increasing traffic problems, Ted Rashleigh, executive director of the association's Vancouver office told the meeting.

The director was the main speaker. He said he did not think a complete system could be implemented under the present government policy of having the highways under one department and the transit under another.

The master plan for road requirements on South Vancouver Island by 1981 was discussed.

Transit systems are a method of reducing traffic congestion, the meeting was told.

Among other items discussed at the meeting were:

● Parkways instead of freeways.

● Hovercraft plying between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

● Arterial roads.

The meeting's panelists were: G. A. Barr of the CPAC, A. C. Baylis of the Victoria Labor Council, B. N. Squirrell of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. The moderator was N. A. Swainson of the University of Victoria.

Students Want $10 Sliced From Tuitions

By BILL STAVDAL

University of Victoria students will ask the administration for a $10 reduction in tuition fees, student council president Stephen Bigsby announced Thursday.

The students want a token share of the extra funds allotted to the university this week by the provincial government, Mr. Bigsby said after an executive meeting of the student council.

Fees were increased $54 in 1965 and now stand at $428 a year.

PRINCIPLE

Earlier this week, Education Minister Peterson announced total grants of $5,180,500 to the university for the 1966-67 fiscal year. The amount was slightly more than the university asked for, said president Dr. Malcolm Taylor.

Mr. Bigsby said the request for a fee cut was a matter of principle.

Last year the administration reluctantly raised fees after the government failed to approve the budget requested by the university, he recalled.

BENEFIT

Tuition fees were boosted to make up the difference.

"Now we feel that the students who had to suffer to make up the difference should be granted some of the benefit of the extra money that has come to the university," said Mr. Bigsby.

"We realize that the university hasn't had millions dropped in its lap, and we're not asking much," he added.

GOVERNORS

A $10 fee decrease would cost the university $35,000 on an estimated enrolment of 3,500 next fall.

Shut Window Ends Nesting

The government has squeezed out two pigeons which tried to build a nest in a men's washroom at the legislative building.

Workmen closed the window through which the birds had been flying, and threw away the straw which was being used for a nest.

Mr. and Mrs. Garth Bakewell

California Honeymoon

Easter lilies and spring floral arrangements decorated the First Baptist Church recently when Rev. J. Watson united in marriage Janeen Skates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. F. Skates, 1050 Colville Road, and Garth Bakewell, son of Mrs. E. Bakewell and the late Mr. Bakewell, 4112 Glenford Avenue.

The auburn-haired bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was radiant in her gown of lustrous ivory satin. The fitted bodice was lace-trimmed and featured lily point sleeves. The softly flared floor-length skirt was enhanced by a train which cascaded from a self bow at the waistline. A rosette of silk held her misty silk chapel veil and she carried a crescent bouquet of red roses and carnations.

Mrs. B. Holness, sister of the bride, as matron of honor, Mrs. D. Smith, bridesmaid, and Miss Sharon Watson, bridesmaid, were similarly attired in gowns of pink peau de soie in Empire line. Capes of crystal sparkle nylon topped the bodices and trains of the same material flowed from a bow at the waistline. They wore ruffled headpieces on tone and carried recent bouquets of pink carnations.

Prior to the bride's entrance at the church Mrs. K. Hilton sang "The Wedding Benediction," and during the service she sang "The Wedding Prayer" and "O Perfect Love." The organist was Mr. J. Tumball.

Mr. N. Laing was best man. Lily of the valley and silver bells marked the pews to which

Mr. D. Smith and Mr. J. Peace ushered the guests.

A pink and white theme was used to decorate the War Amputations Memorial Centre where the reception was held. The bride's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake flanked by pink tapers and arrangements of roses and carnations. Mr. Laing proposed the toast to the bride.

Members of the First Baptist CGE served the wedding supper and Art King's Orchestra supplied music for the evening.

For a honeymoon trip to California the new Mrs. Bakewell chose an Italian knit suit in white and brown shades with accessories on tone. She complemented her ensemble with a corsage of yellow feather carnations.

Grandmother's Ring For 'Something Old'

Sandra Lea Donnelly became the bride of Mr. Wayne Charles Mott at a double-ring ceremony in Centennial United Church.

Rev. S. J. Parsons heard the marriage vows for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George N. Donnelly, 1171 Rockland Avenue, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Mott, London, Ont.

Given in marriage by her father the bride chose a floor-length Empire style gown of white brocade with A-line skirt and jewel neckline. The lovely gown, which was made by Miss Sandra Barge, featured a cathedral train cascading from the shoulders. Her two-tiered, scalloped veil in silk illusion net was caught by a floral and tulle headdress. Pink roses and freesia were in her cascade bouquet. For "something old" the bride wore her grandmother's ring.

Mrs. W. T. Patterson as matron of honor for her sister, was in a deep pink peau de soie styled with a belted skirt. Bridesmaids the Misses Sandra Barge and Shauna Donnelly wore Empire style gowns in bright pink peau de soie. Miss Jo-Ann Donnelly, junior bridesmaid, was in a shell pink gown styled after the senior bridesmaids. Little Kathy Patterson, bride's niece, as flower girl was in a shell pink flock nylon over tulle gown. The attendants all carried cascade bouquets of white carnations.

Mr. W. T. Patterson was best man. Ushering were Mr. Mel Kalls and Mr. Art Clum.

Mr. Harry P. McKeever proposed the toast to the bride at the reception which followed at the home of her parents. Daffodils and an arrangement of orange carnations, dahlias and yellow narcissuses decorated the head table.

For a motor trip to the States the new Mrs. Mott donned a bone and light brown ensemble.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Hall, 3014 Leigh Road, announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Georgina Adele, to Mr. William Wayne Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Allen, 4181 Carey Road. The wedding will take place at 8 p.m., May 6, in St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, with Canon Hywel Jones officiating.—(Chevrone Studio)

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Our card club meets twice a month. We are all retired women who have a lot in common.

One woman who joined the club last year has become positively obnoxious. She has held up the game for as long as 15 minutes at a time telling us little anecdotes about her grandchildren.

Mrs. Talkathon never fails to bring several posters and drawings that her grandchildren make in school. We have listened to their essays and poems, ad nauseum. Her stacks of snapshots bore us silly.

We all have grandchildren, Ann, and we are just as proud of ours as she is of hers but we wouldn't think of imposing on folks the way she does.

What can be done to shut this woman up—short of telling her that we are weary of listening to her yak about her grandchildren?—BROKEN RECORD

Dear Rep: At the next meeting announce that you have something cute to tell about YOUR grandchildren. Drag out an interminable yarn—a d nauseum. Be sure to pass around a few dozen snapshots.

When you're finished, apologize for taking so much time and suggest that the club adopt a rule—no more talking about grandchildren. Recommend that the fine for breaking the rule be $5. After that, if Mrs. Talkathon insists on chattering about her grandchildren it's going to be mighty expensive.

Dear Ann Landers: I was knocked out by a sentence which appeared in your column recently. Miss K.Q. asked—and with a perfectly straight face—"If the boys think virginity is so important, why don't they leave a few around?"

The lady's question implies that the deflowered ladies have all been drugged, slugged, hit house. Nevertheless, every weekend I have to broom out at least four or five females who have pestered the boys to let them see their rooms.

Yesterday an 18-year-old lad asked if I would go to his room and request that the girl leave. "I can't get her out," he said.

So, please, Ann Landers, don't perpetuate the myth that the little boys are seducing the little girls left and right. Generally it's mutual. Sometimes it's the girl who does the seducing.—IN COMMUNICATION

Dear In: I appreciate your comments and would not deny that there is a large portion of truth in what you say. Indistinctly, however, the male is the predator and no matter how wild some of the girls may seem, nature has decreed that the chase will be chased—and sometimes caught. This is not my personal opinion, it is part of The Great Design.

Complaint Series Grows

Drive-In Noise Problem 'Typical of Whole Street'

Noise complained of at an Oak Bay Avenue drive-in could just be part of the three-quarter mile, engine-revving and general hubbub which goes on along that thoroughfare every night, Ald. Clyde Savage suggested Thursday.

Members of city council finance committee were considering another in a series of complaints received over the years about sleep-killing disturbances around the drive-in.

In the latest, Mrs. Lillian Savoy threatened to withhold her taxes if something was not done. Her complaint was signed by about 30 other residents in the district.

ORIGINAL FAULT

"I really don't know what we can do," said City Manager Dennis Young.

Regulations governing hours of operation could be imposed by city council, but they would have to be general throughout the city and not confined to one area. The fault was in ever allowing a drive-in to be established there in the first place.

"However, now that it is there, I must say that the management has been most cooperative in trying to control noise," said Mr. Young.

USED TO NOISE

A commissioner was employed and a city dog-master service patrolled at irregular intervals throughout the night. In addition, the police had been keeping a close check.

"I am used to the noise from Oak Bay Avenue now, and can sleep right through it, but there is plenty of it, believe me," said Ald. Savage. "Last night it sounded as though there was a chase with sirens, shrieking tires and even what sounded like shots, although they probably were not."

The business was being as well run as was possible, the alderman thought.

Once more the police department will be asked to keep a close watch on the area.

Beer Dregs Kept Boys Alive

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP)—Two boys who confessed "we aren't even supposed to play together because we get into trouble" were found safe Thursday in a sealed boxcar 13 days and 1,000 miles from the start of their trip in Fayetteville, N.C.

It was their first solid food since April 8, when they sneaked into the box car loaded with empty beer bottles after "a man told us it was leaving for Milwaukee (that same night)." For nearly two weeks, their only nourishment was beer they drained from empty bottles in the hundreds of cases stacked in the insulated—but not refrigerated—car.

The tribute to a family judgment came from David Harvey, 13-year-old son of Sgt. and Mrs. David W. Harvey, and 13-year-old William Waddell, son of WO and Mrs. William Waddell. The youngsters told about planning the trip—"sort of"—while eating poached eggs, toast and milk at county emergency hospital, where they were checked out and pro-

They were found Thursday morning in the car which arrived in Milwaukee April 18 after a journey that put it in trains stopping at Marion, N.C., Elkhorn City and Ashland, Ky., Columbus, Ohio, Saginaw and Ludington, Mich., and finally aboard a Chesapeake and Ohio car ferry to cross Lake Michigan.

When workmen Kenneth Hanning and John Stein broke the car's seal at the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. train shed one of the boys said from its depths, "thank you, mister. Thank God you opened that door."

At hospital, attendants reported the boys were dirty, tired and hungry but otherwise all right.

The youngsters, both sixth-grade pupils at Belvedere Elementary School in Fayetteville, were reported missing April 8.

'Not Spy for Reds'

Communist Foe Sues CIA Agent

TORONTO (CP) — Erik Heine, 46, says he has fought against Communists all his life and has nine years in Soviet prisons to prove it.

A former Estonian refugee now living in suburban Rexdale, he met reporters Thursday to discuss a slander action he brought against Juri Raus, 39, of Hyattsville, Md. He seeks $10,000 damages.

Mr. Heine said Raus said he was an agent of KGB, the Soviet secret police. In pre-trial hearings Raus said he gave information about Mr. Heine in his capacity as a Central Intelligence Agency agent in the United States.

'PRIVILEGED'

The CIA says the information on Mr. Heine is privileged and won't be disclosed. For the same reason, it says Raus can't be sued.

Mr. Heine, foreman of an artistic woodworking plant, is a candidate for election to the Estonian Cultural Council, top agency for former Estonian citizens living in Canada. He says Raus's accusation damaged the respect held for him by the Legion of Estonian Liberation Incorporated, a veterans organization.

He told reporters he was captured by the Russians in 1940 in Estonia. In 1941 he was exchanged as a prisoner of war and fought with the Estonian army, under the Germans, against Russia.

RECAPTURED

Heine said he was recaptured in 1944 but returned to Estonia after escaping from a Russian slave camp where he was imprisoned for a winter.

He said he was sentenced to death by the Soviets for treason after being arrested in the Estonian capital of Tallin in 1950. But the sentence was commuted to 25 years' imprisonment when he bluffed authorities into thinking he was a German citizen. He was released in 1956 and came to Canada the next year.

Siegfried Videnbaum, editor-in-chief of the Estonian newspaper Meie Elu, said there are about 9,000 Estonians in Toronto and a Soviet agent's job, if he infiltrated the community, might be to try to persuade Estonians to return home.

TOUGH STAND

Mr. Heine, he said, was among a group which advocated the toughest possible stand against this type of propaganda, most of which now arrives from Estonia by mail.

Wednesday night Mr. Heine said he at no time had any communication with the CIA, which, he said, thinks he is an impostor.

"They think Erik Heine is dead and that I, a Communist agent, am taking his place."

"It is preposterous," he declared. "How can I deceive my own mother (who lives with him) and the many friends who knew me when we lived in Estonia?"

Jury Puts Blame On Driver

A driver whose car was involved in a fatal collision with a tiny girl was termed negligent by a coroner's jury Wednesday night.

The jury ruled that Roseanne Lee died as a result of negligence by driver Tim Choo, 573 Manchester.

Roseanne, who was to celebrate her second birthday Sunday, was killed in the 900-block North Park Street.

ONLY DAUGHTER

She was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tim Lee, 950 North Park.

The jury deliberated for more than an hour before reaching its verdict.

Cause of the child's death was given as multiple injuries. Police said she was carried some distance on the grille of the car.

DARTED OFF

The driver testified that his speed was about 28 miles per hour at the time, and he had his eye on another child in the vicinity.

The child's grandfather, Son Lee, said she darted out of the driveway of her home and onto the street before he could stop her.

Jewelry Taken In Raid

Cash and jewelry worth at least $250 was reported stolen from the Heywood Avenue apartment of Mrs. K. Atkins in a daylight burglary Wednesday.

Small metal pins found in the apartment lock and on the floor outside the door marked the thief as an expert on locks. Similar pins were found outside another apartment in the same building, but nothing was reported stolen.

Mrs. Atkins missed a ring, carrying five or six pearls, worth $75; a cluster diamond ring, $75; $25 from each of two purses; a gold diamond tie pin, and $50 cash from a strongbox.

Ambulance Outlay Set

Members of the fire wardens' committee approved expenditure of about $14,500 Thursday for a suitable vehicle and equipment to put the city's emergency ambulance service into operation.

The decision must still be ratified by city council, which meets Thursday.

The vehicle approved will cost about $7,200 and emergency equipment, including an inhaler and power and hydraulic tools for opening up crushed automobile bodies, will come to another $4,000. There will be an item of $200 for laundry and the remainder will be made up of insurance and other costs.

City council recently allocated $10,000 for purchase of a vehicle and equipment. The extra money will be levied against the 1966 budget.

Business tax for 1966 will not change. It will remain at 6 1/2 per cent of appraised rental value.

"Taxes have been increased through higher assessment in the business area. There has been a special levy for downtown parking accommodation, and I don't think this is the year for an increase," said City Manager Dennis Young.

Finance committee members agreed.

The city will not send its municipal float nor "Miss Victoria" to the Portland Rose Festival parade this year. Normally the float goes only to the Seafair parade in Seattle and the FNE in Vancouver. To send it to Portland would cost $800 or more, and this would exceed the $3,500 budget for such activity.

City Clerk Marren Waller will attend the International Institute of Municipal Clerks convention in New York in May. Cost: $543.

In response to a complaint from a man whose dog was impounded, health department officials inspected the HPCA premises and found them "clean and well maintained."

A special award for outstanding service will be considered for Kenneth Reid, city electrical engineer, who retires in September after 34 years' service. The special merit award will be in the form of a monthly allowance for the last year of employment. Total value will be in the neighborhood of $200.

Accident Witnesses Sought by Police

Witnesses to a traffic accident on Pandora between Stadacona and Belmont, on the morning of April 9, are being sought by city police.

They are also searching for the driver of the car. In the accident, Mrs. Christine Jean Johnson, 72, of 1344 Grant was in collision with a car. The driver, who did not report the accident, took Mrs. Johnson to Royal Jubilee emergency ward for treatment and then drove her home.

Since the accident, police said, Mrs. Johnson has suffered a relapse and is in satisfactory condition in Gorge Road Hospital. Police have asked that anyone with information about the accident telephone their traffic office at 384-4111, local 28.

Women Struck By Thief

City police are searching for a person who Wednesday morning knocked over two women on Blanshard Street and escaped with a purse containing $2.

Mrs. A. Steele of 777 Blanshard was walking south on Blanshard in the 800 block with her friend, a Mrs. Mead of the Royal Anne apartments, when they were pushed from behind by their assailant.

Mrs. Steele was thrown to the ground and pulled Mrs. Mead on top of her. The assailant grabbed Mrs. Steele's purse and ran away.

Neither of the women were badly hurt in the attack.

Mr. Lake married the former Betty Kaiser of Victoria in 1923, and made many visits here.

Staff Heads

Salary Raises Likely

Salaries of the city manager and department heads will be raised if city council follows recommendations from a conference of the mayor and aldermen in the mayor's office, Thursday.

Discussions on the salary of the city manager, who now gets $17,500 a year, were held at a morning meeting, and talks on the salaries of other heads of departments at a later conference.

Mayor Toome said the raises for department heads would be about 12 per cent. The manager's salary will be increased in accordance with an agreement arrived at when he came here several years ago, in which his pay was to be raised in two stages.

SURVEY PROPOSAL
The mayor said the boosts for department heads were in accordance with a survey made last year at City Hall by a business efficiency firm.

He said the precise salary schedule would be brought forward to the next meeting on city council, on Thursday of next week, for ratification.

Fence Art

Permit System Weighed

Public Works Minister Chant said Thursday his department is going to have to work out some method of issuing permits to control the fence-painting around the provincial museum site.

"Some of the panels are not suitable, and if people want to paint them in a suitable manner, they can do so," he said, referring to some plywood panels on which crude markings had been painted.

The minister said he would like to see the fence-painting contest continue through the summer tourist season, because it was an eye-catching "healthy outlet for people with talent."

ABUSES
He said some people had abused the idea, however, and "it will have to come to the point where people get a permit of some kind, to get it under control."

Mr. Chant said he was in favor of providing a new fence around the Vancouver courthouse fountain site so that artists could go to work all over again in the tourist season.

Physical Training

Teacher to Eye U.K. Plan

George Grant, physical education director of Greater Victoria schools for the past 20 years, will make a study of outdoor physical training in Great Britain this summer.

Mr. Grant 2141 Nell Street, has been awarded a $1,400 fellowship by the federal department of health and welfare to make a two-month study.

His findings will go before physical education teachers across Canada.

He will give special attention to the physical training of retarded children.

Another Victorian, Fred L. Martens of the University of Victoria, has received a National Fitness and Amateur Sport post-graduate scholarship of the university's faculty of education, is now studying for his doctorate at the University of Oregon.

FIGHT BACK WITH ORTHO!

ISOTOX gets rid of aphids, beetles — 250 other tough insect enemies!

You don't have to take it another minute. This very weekend you can fight back and win against the most mercurial enemies your garden knows: aphids that suck the life juice from tender young growth, beetles that tear and bite, bugs that gnaw and grind.

The weapon: ORTHO ISOTOX. The secret: a combination of four separate insecticides that battle and beat 250 different insect marauders. It's a concentrated liquid. So concentrated it costs less than 10¢ to make a full gallon diluted for spray. It's as easy as watering and ISOTOX is compatible with most fungicides for combination control of insects and diseases.

Remember the name: ORTHO ISOTOX. You'll find it — today — at the place you always buy your garden supplies.

Garden Notes

Don't Water Seeds

By M. V. CHESTNUT

You may have noticed that whenever I have given instructions for the starting of seeds indoors or under glass, I have always insisted upon the thorough watering of the soil in the pots or boxes BEFORE the seeds are sown, preferably with boiling water or with a soil fungicide solution to kill off disease spores. After the seeds are sown, I have recommended the covering of the pot with a square of plastic film held in place with a rubber band. The idea here is to hold in the moisture, making it unnecessary to do any watering at all until after the seeds come up.

This is because I have a pronounced aversion to pouring or sprinkling water on soil in which seeds have been sown. In my experience, this is almost always followed by trouble of one kind or another. If the soil has much clay in its composition, it will form a hard crust after the sprinkling, sealing the surface, cutting off the air from the seeds, and making it difficult for the tiny seedlings to break through. Even in a good, loose, porous soil, surface watering is a source of damping-off disease in the seedlings and tends to wash small seeds out of position.

This dislike on my part for watering seeded soil carries over into outdoor sowing too and, whenever possible, I like to fix things so no watering is required until after the seedlings are well up. This is why I always pour water in the prepared seed furrows before sowing, or better still, water in which a touch of soluble fertilizer has been dissolved.

It isn't always possible to maintain enough moisture in the soil to last until the seeds come up, and especially on hot, south-facing, sun-baked sites, the problem is how to keep the soil from drying out without pouring water on its surface. This past few years, I have been adapting some of my indoor seed-starting techniques to outdoor sowing.

For large seeds and widely-spaced seeds, one simple stunt is to cover each seed with a jam jar. This is not, as may be supposed, to protect the seed or seedling from frost, but simply to conserve moisture. Moisture evaporating from the soil condenses on the sides of the jar and runs right down into the soil again, and none is lost.

For smaller seeds and more scattered sowings, I have been making good use of old seed flats. I knock the rotted bottoms out of these shallow wooden boxes, cover them with plastic film held in place with thumbtacks, and sit these on the seeded patches of soil. These extemporized frames must come off as soon as the seeds come up, for baby plants need plenty of air and ventilation. Very tiny plants will still need some protection, though, against wind, battering rain or overly hot sun, and to provide this protection, I use more of my handy bottomless shallow boxes, this time with cheesecloth thumbtacked over them instead of plastic. The cheesecloth admits plenty of air while casting a slight shade and keeping off the wind.

For row crops in the vegetable plot where continuous protection isn't possible without considerable trouble and expense, a good way to conserve moisture is to cover the seeded row with a good thick layer of fresh lawn mowings. Take a peek from time to time and rake them off as soon as the seedlings start to come through.

Reseeded patches of lawn may be covered with a sheet of plastic held in place with bricks or stones around the edge. This, too, must be taken off as soon as the grass seedlings can be seen.

War to End People

So far as I know the Time Capsule is still where they buried it. Beneath Flushing Meadows where they held the New York World's Fair.

I mean the old Fair. They loaded a capsule with things of our time so our briny descendants could dig it up. See how it was in the good old days.

They put in the newspapers and a woman's hat and a can opener, as I recall. Sealed it up, and there it lies.

Have been writing a few items for posterity myself. Intend to put it in a sealed can and bury it in the backyard. Much has happened since the Fair.

First, brainy descendants, there was the War to End War. Then came the War to End People.

After each war, we invented new weapons. They "made war too horrible to fight." It was horrible. But we fought anyway. Toujours gai and toujours dead.

We were a lively bunch. And you had to step lively to stay alive.

Between blasting our fellow men with the old sawed-off, we danced. Everybody danced in our days.

I read that in your day, you will be all Brain.

Our scientists predict that man is evolving to pure brain. No need for dancing legs. And I don't suppose Brains feel like dancing.

But we were just down from the trees, dear descendants.

We had some splendid dances: The waltz and the tango.

The tango and the tango.

Ah, me. I wish you could have been around in these good old days.

Dances in my salad days were a matter of Boy Meets Girl. But today if Boy Meets Girl it is purely by accident. Dancing is pretty solo. Boy frugs thataway. Girl frugs this-away.

I think he still takes her home from the dance. If he can find her.

Most of our dances were originally African. Africans did not dance with girls—if they wanted to putter about a girl, they gave her papa a cow or goat.

They danced to get ready for war. Their wars were not too horrible to fight.

They did not fight to End War. They fought to keep wars going. They fought with spears and were kind of fun if you didn't get stuck.

The winner got all the cows and goats AND the girls.

Our own wars have become complicated and dangerous and nobody wins much of anything.

All this started out (in our day) with The Twist. Which was The Dance to End Dancing.

With Anybody.

There were a few dehdards who felt you weren't really dancing unless you had an armful of girl. But hardly anybody spoke to them. And they weren't invited to any of the good parties.

They were not photographed for TV. And when any music they liked came on the radio, somebody went over and snapped it off or changed the station.

But the Big Beat from the mop-head music masters! That was Boss—as we said, brainy descendants. Meaning the best.

There was a lot of energy on the dance floor. But no heart in it.

This made everybody tense and jittery.

Some people tried to walk it off in protest parades.

But nobody suggested that an armful of girl is more social than simply waving your arms to music. We had become too brainy.

And that was the way The War to End People started.

Anyway, the fun was over.

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

New Safari A-Go-Go?

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—William Holden stayed two days in Switzerland, to put his lavish mansion on the market, then flew to Kenya to pick up partner Ray Ryan, and off they went to Seychelles, an island off the east coast of Africa. And what they are doing there I can't imagine. Boats stop there once every three weeks. They are probably planning a new safari-a-go-go—they have done very well with the club in Kenya. Quite a character, Ray. I knew him when he owned most of Palm Springs.

Michael Calise's next picture in Hollywood, for Hitchcock, has the angry, roaring title of R-R-R... There was a nasty rumor that Peter Sellers had walked out of Casino Royale in a royal huff. But they say, no, it's just that while John Huston is putting David Niven through his paces, they won't be needing Peter for a while.

The King's Men—now there's a title. And Glynnis Johns will be doing the play in London. Also a TV pilot with her father Marylyn Johns. Looks like she is pulling up stakes in Hollywood. James Mason is floating dreamily around London with a delicious morsel from Hong Kong who has a name—Lella. She visited him on the set of Georgy Girl, brought by daughter Porty.

Jean Paul Belmondo continues to deny that he is separated from his wife. But my prying pussycats in Paris tell me that he has been living at a hotel, not in the family home. Also, Ursula Andress will be in his next picture, which is titled, The Thief.

A beautiful cast for The Quiller Memorandum—Sir Alec Guinness, George Segal, Max von Sydow, Sonia Berger and George Sanders, who is still crushed from the heavy loss he took in Scotland over a business enterprise. I would have bet on George to take the Scots. Someone up there was too canny for him. Backing them all in the film is Ivan Foxwell as producer, Michael Anderson, director, and Harold Pinter has written the script. If they go wrong with all of this, it's their own fault.

Burt Lancaster's Assassination Bureau will take him all over the world—London, Berlin, Paris, Madrid, San Francisco. But his picture for Frank Perry, The Swimmer, will take him only as far as Connecticut, for which he is glad. He starts in June and Perry is directing for Sam Spiegel.

No one knew it, but Charlie Chaplin was in America last fall. But only for a few minutes. His plane was en route to Jamaica and touched down at a U.S. airport to take on fuel. When he comes the next time, probably for the premiere of The Countess of Hong Kong, he will be flanked by Sophia Loren and Marlon Brando, and the whole world will know.

Ava Gardner should have learned from Doris Day. One time, when Doris was travelling and trying to avoid the press, she wore her oldest clothes and no make-up. She was unhappy when, at the first stop, a fan dashed over and asked, "May I have your autograph Miss Day?" Ava flew into London in a shapeless black coat down to her ankles, hair straight, parted in the middle, obviously coiffed at home, and thick dark glasses, the standard equipment for all travelling stars. But the photographers knew her and clickety-clack. And click.

Kelr Dallas and Gary Lockwood lunched with me at the MGM studio in Boreham Woods, Herts. Kelr was wearing his space working suit—a sort of denim romper. Gary, who had been running around the big wheel for exercise—floating near the space ship—was huffing and puffing, and wearing a dressing gown. They are starring in Stanley Kubrick's 2001: A Space Odyssey. They are PhDs as well as pilots and spend five years in outer space, "trying," said Kelr, who is the leading scientist, "to find out when and if aliens may exist. We encounter evidence on the moon of an ancient and superb intelligence."

JACK SMITH and Wife in Hassle

Oscars Domestic Comedy

The Academy Awards caused the usual discussion this year at our house. Most of the trouble was over Shelly Winters and Lee Marvin.

"I just wish it hadn't been her," my wife said as Miss Winters went up to get her Oscar.

"Why not?"

"She won it once before, you know."

"What difference does that make? Bette Davis won twice. Anyway, you didn't even see the picture, did you? What was it?"

"A Patch of Blue. I think she played a shrewish mother."

"That's different," I conceded. "I'm sorry she won, too. Every time a female starts screaming and throwing a few pots and pans around they think she's a great actress. Any housewife can do that."

"She also thought Oscar Werner should have won instead of Lee Marvin."

"Remember how marvelous Oscar Werner was in Jules and Jim?"

"Jules and Jim hasn't got anything to do with it," I pointed out. "I believe he was up for Ship of Fools. Besides, I thought Lee Marvin was magnificent as that drunken gun-fighter."

"That's just it, every time a man plays a drunken sot on the screen they think he's a great actor. Any husband can do that."

She was also disappointed when Julie Christie won as best actress for Darling.

"What's wrong with her?" I asked. "She looks great to me."

"I wish Simon Signoret had got it. Remember how wonderful she was in Room at the Top?"

"What's Room at the Top got to do with it? Besides, didn't she win it for Room as the Top, come to think of it?"

"Yes. Remember that scene where she gets in the car and drives off in the night?"

"Now wait a minute," I said. "Why, may I ask, it is all right for Simon Signoret to win twice, but not Shelly Winters?"

"Simon Signoret is more mature, for one thing."

"More mature than Shelly Winters?"

"No. More mature than Julie Christie."

"Have you ever seen Julie Christie in a movie?"

"No. But how did you like the way she carried on when she went up to get the Oscar. Good Lord! All that kid stuff."

"When they vote," I explained, "they don't know how the winner is going to act when they go up to get their Oscar."

"Remember how Simon Signoret acted when she won? That's my idea of a woman."

"I still don't see," I said, "why it's all right for Simon Signoret to win twice but not Shelly Winters."

"It depends entirely," she said, "on the actress and on the part. Anyway, who did you want to win?"

"Julie Andrews."

"Don't be silly," she said. "She won it last year."

Killing Done Calmly Court Told

From AP Reuters
CHESTER, England (CP)—An eyewitness said Thursday he watched a youth systematically hacked with an axe and strangled for several minutes.

Of the alleged killer, Ian Brady, he said:
"I have seen butchers working in the shops show as much emotion as he did when they are cutting up a sheep's ribs. He was very calm, very calm indeed."

SEXUAL THRILLS
Testimony by David Smith, 18, was delivered in a halting monotone and the two accused—Brady, 28, and his mistress, Myra Hindley, 23—stared impassively from the dock.

They have pleaded innocent to playing three times for sexual thrills and burying the bodies of two child victims on the Pennine Moors.

The case is being heard before Mr. Justice Fenton Atkinson.

MARRIED TO SISTER
Smith is married to Miss Hindley's sister, Maureen, 19.

Smith outlined the methodical and subsequent strangulation of Edward Evans, 17.
The prosecution says the killing was staged in front of Smith in a house Brady and Miss Hindley shared to convince him of Brady's homicidal tendencies and to complete his corruption.

BLOOD MOPPED
Smith said he was scared to help Brady and Miss Hindley mop the blood and trim the body.

Smith said about three weeks before Evans was killed, Brady read him some passages from the works of Marquis de Sade, the French writer from whose name is derived the word sadism.

Judge Atkinson

The prosecution claims the two lovers killed the children—a 10-year-old girl, Lesley Ann

RECORDINGS
The prosecution has told the jury of 12 men they will hear tape recordings of the girl's dying screams. The tapes were allegedly made by the couple after the girl was forced to pose for a series of pornographic pictures.

Smith said he was in the kitchen when his sister-in-law cried out: "Dave help him."

Smith rushed to the living room to see Brady, legs apart and an axe held high above his head, struggling with the strangled youth.

"HALF-SCREAMING"
"I just froze and stopped dead," Smith said. "My first thought was that Ian had hold of a life-size rag doll and was just waving it about."

"Then it dawned on me it was not a rag doll... I thought my stomach would turn over. It was half screaming and groaning."

"The lad groaned and Ian just lifted the axe... and brought it down on the fellow's head," Smith said.

Smith has been described by the prosecution as "a student of murder," hared to the Brady home to witness Evans' slaying.

After Brady again struck Evans with the axe, he put a cushion cover over the youth's head and looped a cord round his neck, pulling it tight.

"He kept pulling it and pulling it, saying: 'you —, you bastard, and saying it over and over again," Smith went on.

Judge Refuses To Reduce Bail

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice Harold W. McInnes said here Thursday he has no intention of reducing bail for Rene Castellan, charged with capital murder in the arsenic poisoning of his wife.

Castellan, 40, a former radio personality, has been unable to raise $25,000 bail set recently by the same judge. His lawyer, Albert Mackoff, said he court $15,000 bail is sufficient to ensure Castellan will remain in Vancouver for trial.

The application for bail reduction was opposed by city prosecutor Stewart McMorran. Mr. McMorran said a preliminary hearing into the charge will start sometime next month.

Castellan's wife, Esther, 40, died in Vancouver General Hospital July 11, 1965. A coroner's jury ruled in December her death was homicide by a person or persons unknown.

"What two ideas are more inseparable than Beer and Britannia?"

So said the noted writer, Sydney Smith in the early 19th century. Today, many still believe that good beer is a British art. It's certainly a British tradition. After all, Charrington Toby was first brewed over two hundred years ago, in 1757. Only recently have the Charringtons allowed Toby's recipe to leave the country. Now you may enjoy Toby in British Columbia... for it was to Carling that Charringtons entrusted the Toby recipe. Have a Toby!

Crown-Owned CNR

Profit Picture Marred By Old Debts

By JAMES NELSON

Jamaicans To Help In Harvest

OTTAWA (UPI)—The federal government will allow several hundred male Jamaicans into Canada to work on southwestern Ontario's fruit and vegetable harvest this summer and fall, Immigration Minister Marchand announced Thursday.

While the official Conservative opposition remained silent on the announcement, it drew mixed reaction from the three minority parties.

Under the program, the Jamaicans will be allowed in under strictly controlled conditions to work on farms for up to 16 weeks—with a guaranteed minimum term of employment of eight weeks.

Farmers employing them must offer certain basic working and living conditions including:

A minimum wage of $1.25-an hour with continuity of work that will assure earnings averaging at least $50 a week for the period of employment; lodging comparable to general Canadian standards; at least eight weeks of work; and payment by the grower of transportation costs both ways.

Marchand stressed that the employment of foreign workers must not prejudice the hiring of Canadians.

OTTAWA (CP)—The Crown-owned CNR is looking to gross revenues this year of $1,000,000,000 out of which it might pay a profit to the taxpayer or be able to cut freight rates and other prices if its huge debt were brought into line with reality.

CNR President Donald Gordon said in the 1965 annual report of the huge railway, hotel, telecommunication, shipping and trucking complex that the billion-dollar revenue figure will be approached this year. It was $914,700,000 in 1965.

But against last year's gross revenues, which included $827,300,000 from railway operations, there were railway expenses of $817,400,000, and net interest on the CNR's debt of $61,900,000. There was non-railway income of $18,600,000.

DEFICIT CUT

Last year's $33,400,000 deficit on all CNR accounts showed a further reduction from previous years. The company has long argued that it was not saddled with the debt of old railway companies that went into its make-up in the 1920s, it would be showing a profit.

As a state-owned enterprise, its profit would be paid into the treasury—and to a few investors who still hold some equity in the old lines. But as a public enterprise, anything more than a nominal profit would be devoted to reducing fares and freight rates, and to improving plant and facilities.

BIGGER SHARE

The 1965 report reflected an increase in the CNR's share of major portions of Canadian railway freight traffic—in grain and manufactured goods handling—and a modernization of passenger traffic facilities in high-density population areas. It said it would continue to seek the traveller's dollar where this is profitable, and try to get out of passenger service in uneconomic areas.

Train Theft

Hijacking Suspect Captured

LONDON (UPI)—James Edward White, who said his cut from Britain's $7,300,000 great train robbery was $264,000, was found by Scotland Yard detectives Thursday living in an $11-a-week room overlooking the English Channel.

White, 45, a Second World War paratrooper and erstwhile innkeeper, was arrested in the city resort town of Littlestone-on-Sea.

He said he was "fed up being on the run" for the 1963 robbery, history's greatest.

CHARGED
Members of Scotland Yard's crack "Flying Squad" rushed White to Aylesbury, 40 miles northwest of London and headquarters for the investigation into the theft.

White was charged Thursday night with "conspiring to rob the mail and robbing the mail with other persons and being armed with offensive weapons." He was to appear today before a magistrate in Linslade, not far from Aylesbury.

White had been the subject of the most intense manhunt in Britain since the days of Jack the Ripper for his part in

NEW YORK (LAT)—The president of the American College of Physicians predicted Thursday it will take another decade for heart transplants to become widely used surgical procedures.

But Dr. Irving S. Wright called Dr. Michael DeBakey's heart transplant in Houston, Tex., the beginning of a new chapter in medicine, which will eventually extend the lives of thousands of heart patients.

In terms of benefit to humanity, the age of artificial organs and transplants will surpass the exploration of space, the New York cardiologist said.

"We have entered a new chapter of medicine, in the same way that the first space shot signalled man's move into deep space probes," he said. "The first probes may not be very successful, but they will lead to successes in the future."

"The many problems—the body's rejection of foreign substances, the failure of pumping systems, difficulties with clotting—all have to be overcome," Wright said. "We know we will see them, but we don't know the incidents we will have to expect or the success in combating them."

"The only way to find out, really is by implanting them in man. You can go just so far in experiments with animals. But you run into problem with man that you don't find in animals. What works well in animals will not necessarily work in man."

U.S. War Toll to Date Could Double This Year

From AP, UPI

The number of Americans killed in the Viet Nam War now is more than 3,000. It could reach 6,000 or more by the end of the year if the recent rate of battle losses is maintained.

A summary of U.S. casualties, released Thursday, listed 3,047 servicemen dead since Jan. 1, 1961, the date from which the U.S. counts its Viet Nam dead.

The roster increased by 89 names in the week ended Saturday. The weekly toll has been running at around 100.

EXCEEDS 1965

The new report showed more men died in the last 3½ months of 1965 than in all of last year. The 1965 total reached 1,421 through April 16. Combat deaths for 1965 stood at 1,365.

Americans wounded reached a total of 15,863 at the end of last week. More than half of these were hit since the beginning of the year.

Meanwhile U.S. and Vietnamese marines and the Viet Cong battled so close to Saigon today that residents of the capital could see bombs hurtling on their targets from U.S. bombers supporting the operation.

BIG BATTLE
In the Central Highlands, the Viet Cong made a mortar attack before dawn on the air field at Pleiku, 240 miles northeast of Saigon.

Red Missiles Spur U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—A speedup in ballistic missile defence for the U.S. was urged Thursday by the Senate armed services committee to match reported Russian efforts on similar defences.

Chairman Richard B. Russell (Dem.-Ga.) said the committee unanimously approved addition of $167,900,000 to defence authorization for a complex anti-missile missile.

Police in Cholon, the Chinese section of Saigon, described the operation on the outskirts of the capital as a big one. They said U.S. and Vietnamese were engaged with the Viet Cong near the Long Vinh, which cuts through the Cholon sector.

The bombing was among the closest ever made to Saigon, which had been all but immune from the Viet Cong war.

THREE SHOT
Politically-inspired violence erupted Thursday in the normally tranquil resort of Dalat, which had been all but immune even from the Viet Nam war.

Three civilians were reported killed in a gun battle between students and soldiers.

The fighting broke two days of relative quiet on the tense South Vietnamese political scene.

Dalat, in the mountains 145 miles northwest of Saigon, is considered the coolest spot in the country. It is an oasis for government officials, the wealthy and U.S. troops on leave.

No Charges Laid

Mountie Probed In Bank Holdup

OTTAWA (UPI)—RCMP

Commissioner George McClellan confirmed Thursday that a member of the force is under investigation for the armed robbery earlier this week of a bank in Trenton, N.S.

But a police spokesman refused to say whether the man was under arrest or had been charged.

Solicitor-General Lawrence Pennell said in the Commons under questioning from Robert Coates (PC-Cumberland) that he had been told no charges had been laid by mid-afternoon and an investigation was proceeding.

IT'S ONLY MONEY

Pennell was asked by Coates to confirm the arrest Thursday of an RCMP officer "and advise the House of the circumstances leading to the arrest as well as what charges, if any, are being laid."

A lone gunman collected $3,900 Monday when he entered the Bank of Nova Scotia in Trenton shortly before closing time, handed a teller a flight bag, and ordered: "Fill it up... it's only money."

The holdupman fled in a newspaperman's car.

Liberals Survive Confidence Vote

OTTAWA (CP)—The minority Liberal government defeated a Conservative non-confidence motion 112 to 93 in the Commons budget debate Thursday night.

The motion said the Liberal government failed to stimulate trade and production and had not tackled problems of inflation.

Seventy-four Conservatives in the chamber were backed by 15 New Democrats, Social Credit Leader Thompson and two of his followers and independent Conservative Maurice Allard (Sherbrooke).

CREDITISTES

Supporting the 103 Liberals against the motion were Creditiste Leader Caouette and six of his party, H. A. Olson (St.-Medienne Hat) and J. A. Monaghan (Ind.-Trois-Rivieres).

Standings in the 265-seat Commons are Liberals 131, Conservatives 97, New Democrats 21, Creditistes nine, Social Credit five and independents two.

Social Credit MPs have maintained the country does not want another election and in the past have voted with the government when the issue appeared likely to bring a close vote.

PARTY SPLIT
This time the party split, with three of its members supporting the motion and one siding with the government.

The budget debate is expected to wind up today. Conservative House Leader Michael Starr suggested this during Thursday's debate.

Price Rise Concerns U.S.

Hope I Would Have His Courage, Says Coroner

Mercy Killer 'Morally Correct'

MONMOUTH, England (UPI)—A coroner said Thursday a father was "morally perfectly correct" in taking the life of his incurably ill 12-year-old son.

Arthur Gray, 45, killed the boy who was dying of cancer, last July with an overdose of tablets and gas. Gray took his own life the same way last Saturday.

Monmouth coroner Kenneth de Tressure said at the inquest on

Gray, "this is quite one of the most distressing cases I have ever had to deal with. It starts off with a perfectly happy family—mother, father and child."

The son contracted the disease in 1964. Gray was convicted of manslaughter but given the lenient sentence of two years on probation.

"I am quite certain in my own mind that the deceased was morally perfectly correct in taking the course he did take in connection with his incurable little son. Legally, of course, he was wrong," said de Tressure.

"All I can say is that if I found myself in circumstances like the deceased, I hope I would have the moral courage to do what he did."

"One fact sticks clearly in my mind and that was the evidence that the little boy was so dreadfully ill that he actually screamed if anybody approached him when he was lying in bed—undoubtedly out of terror for the pain he would be caused if he were moved or touched."

The coroner said that after the tragedy, Gray and his wife separated because she had not wanted to continue living in the house where their son died while Gray refused to leave it because of his affection for the boy.

He said that judging from the notes Gray wrote before killing himself in the house, "it is perfectly apparent that he felt completely unable to go on any further and he refers to himself as ceasing to be any longer a useful member of the community."

VIEWS of SPORT

By Red Smith

It was 11:20 on the eve of the Mets' first exhibition game in St. Petersburg and one of the literary set quartered in the team's beach-front motel was just finishing his daily run at the Nobel Prize. The typewriter went tap-tap tap, with long pauses, on big ones like "is" and "but."

The telephone rang and a young voice, evidently calling from the next room, protested apologetically that the racket made sleeping difficult. "You see," explained the caller, "we have a game to play tomorrow."

"Sorry," said the disturber of the peace, "I'm just finishing." He looked at his watch.

"Lord, I'm getting old," he muttered. "The ball players I used to travel with never knew there was such an hour as 11:20 a.m. or p.m."

He was thinking of the days when a ball game started at 3 p.m. and was over by 5. At 11:20 p.m. a player would be up-ticking down the hotel fire escape, outward bound to seek adventure. At 11:20 a.m. he might open one eye.

The Creative Urge

There have been some changes since Tim Hurst, the old umpire, laid down the dictum, "You can't beat them hours," and that is the theme of a magazine piece by Jim Brosnan, who used to be a sort of free lance pitcher and now is a free lance writer.

As a pitcher, Jim wasn't a free lance by choice. He is a large, amiable, four-eyed, pipe-smoking martini man out of Xavier College in Cincinnati, whose literary leanings made his employers nervous. General managers of ball clubs aren't especially upset if a player can spell out Dick Tracy at breakfast, but they are suspicious of an athlete who can read social significance into Pogo and Brosnan overstepped all bounds. He not only read entire books with hard covers and no pictures, he wrote 'em.

Consequently, in nine big league summers he worked for the Chicago Cubs, the St. Louis Cardinals, the Cincinnati Reds, and the Chicago White Sox.

His first book, "The Long Season," had a mixed reception. Some reviewers hailed it as witty, perceptive, outspoken, realistic, full of rare insights and humor. On the other hand some shared the view of Solly Hemus, Brosnan's manager in St. Louis, who did not come off the pages as an American folk hero.

Asked what he thought of the work, Solly said, "He's the first pitcher I ever heard of who won nine games and felt he had to write a book about it."

Jim's Long Season

Jim's magazine piece is shorter than the book, but it is entitled "It's a Long, Long Season," which suggests that some-thing is in a rut. It says the ball player's lot is not a happy one. It says ball players get tired.

"Of all professional sports," Jim contends, "baseball, while the least arduous, is the most fatiguing."

Citing supporting evidence as occasional collapses by Willie Mays, Brosnan mentions night games, jet travel, defeat on the field, and adverse criticism in the press as factors that combine to wear a man down. He says it's better to get booted in the afternoon because harsh sounds carry more clearly in night air.

He argues that there are too many games in a season, too many miles to travel, and too many losers in a 101-game league.

Generally speaking, he is right. He pointed out that doctors have been studying something called jet lag, which refers to the effects of long, fast travel on the body. Businessmen whose jobs keep them jumping across three or four time zones in a single night know that sometimes they need a day or two to get their insides adjusted to new eating and sleeping schedules, and they don't have to hit a curve.

Root of the Trouble

Everybody except the club owners agreed that 162 games are too many. Brosnan says the reason for increasing the old 154-game schedule was to give the fans eight more opportunities to pay the additional travel costs incurred when the leagues expanded to California.

Most big league teams encounter bad weather at the start of the season because play begins too early in the year. Trying to open later and still crowd in 162 games would increase the burden of doubleheaders, which is already too great. Cutting the schedule to 144 games—16 with each rival instead of 18—would seem to be an obvious solution, but try to get Walter O'Malley to give up one of his nine juicy dates with the Giants in Chavez Ravine.

Players would benefit physically by a slightly more leisurely working schedule, and the chances are fans would see uniformly better baseball. Owners would suffer horribly, though. On days when the turnstiles aren't clicking, the silence drives them mad.

Lions May Move

VANCOUVER (CP)—B.C. for this year's training program. Lions general manager Herb Capozzi says his Canadian football team is looking for a new location for summer training.

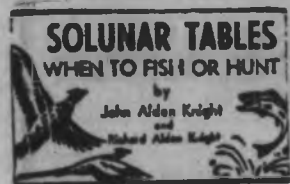

Mr. Capozzi said there is a chance renovations to the hotel at the Lions' usual camp at Courtenay on Vancouver Island may not be completed in time.

Empress Meet In Crucial Spot

Vancouver's Herb Fritz moved into the semi-final play for the Sir Edward Beatty trophy at the 39th annual Empress golf tournament at Victoria Golf Club.

Two Portland shot-makers, Rudy Taggart and two-time champion Ross Clark, face each other in today's action. Ken Crowshaw of Calgary is the other semi-finalist.

Mario Wants All-Out Effort Tonight

Grimness Grips Leafs After Loss

By JIM TANG

SAN FRANCISCO — There is no feeling of panic but there is a certain grimness about the Victoria Maple Leafs following their 3-2 overtime defeat by the San Francisco Seals Wednesday night which squared their Western Hockey League semi-final at 2-2.

A determined, fired-up crew after a team meeting Wednesday morning, the Leafs came up with a fine effort only to find it not quite enough as the Seals responded with what was their best performance in 10 games this season against the Leafs.

It was a result which could lift the winners and leave the losers dejected, and there lies the big danger for the Leafs.

However, there was still solace for the positive thinker and Victoria coach Frank Mario found it.

"One thing about it," he said yesterday, "is that the Seals cannot play any better hockey than they did Wednesday night as we stayed with them right into overtime. And we can do better."

Mario would name no names but it was a fact that the Leafs just missed with at least four of them considerably below par and contributing little to Wednesday's effort.

That brought up the subject of possible lineup switches, and there is every chance that the Leafs may try one or two different alignments for tonight's fifth game at the Cow Palace.

"We have to make some changes and I think you will see some," Mario said yesterday. He refused to share his thinking but it appears that the most likely switch is the moving of Larry Keenan between Lou Jankowski and Gordie Redahl with John Seaver moving in between Dick Lamoureux and Mike Labadie.

And that could be just about where it ends. Mario is limited in the moves he can make by a lack of depth. He can hardly split up his first line of Milan Marcetta, Bob Barlow and Andy Heberton and his only spare forward is rookie-centre Dave Parenteau.

Sadly missed is Steve Witluk, who has seen no playoff action because of a knee injury. Witluk had only six goals during the season but the peppery veteran was often a sparkplug, played well as a penalty-killer and was available to fill in on any line on the right side, where the Leafs have been hurting.

"Without Steve we have no flexibility at all," Mario says. "I'm going to have to try something new but there aren't too many changes I can make."

There was, however, some good news for the Leafs yesterday. Defenceman Aut Erickson came back from X-rays with the news that the little toe on his left foot wasn't broken after all.

Erickson was hit midway through the first period by a puck shot by Tom Thurlby and it was at first feared the toe was broken. He was limping yesterday but is expected to be able to take his regular turn tonight.

Habs Finely Honed

By AL McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens appear to have reached the fine edge needed to succeed in playoff competition, but coach Toe Blake now has the task of keeping them sharply honed until Sunday.

Canadians, who open their best-of-seven Stanley Cup final series against Detroit Red Wings here Sunday at 2:30 p.m. EDT, continued their daily practice sessions Thursday and looked in peak condition for the opener.

The club apparently has rebounded well from the bruising semi-final series in which they knocked off Toronto Maple Leafs in four straight games.

FULL SPEED

Centre Henri Richard, who missed the last two games against Toronto skated at full speed during Thursday's workout, indicated he has fully recovered from the knee injury he received when checked heavily into the boards by Leafs' defenceman Larry Hnman in the second game.

Blake ran his team through a game-like, 90-minute workout as he cracked the whip and watched his players respond as though they were facing the Wings.

The Montreal coach continued to juggle his forward alignments, but said after the practice that Richard's spirited showing may influence his starting assignments Sunday.

SOME CHANGES

"I'll likely start Richard with Dick Duff and Bob Rousseau on the wings," Blake said. "But I won't hesitate to move Ralph Backstrom in there in place of Richard if I have to."

Backstrom regularly plays with wingers Claude Larose and John Ferguson, but when Richard was injured in the Toronto series, Blake inserted him at the centre slot between Duff and Rousseau and the line was flying.

Claude Provost, the right winger who drew the assignment of checking Chicago Black Hawks' Bobby Hull and Toronto's Frank Mahovlich all season, doesn't think it will be any soft touch against Detroit.

SOFT ICE

In Detroit, Red Wings went back to work Thursday in preparation for the opening of the Stanley Cup playoff final in Montreal Sunday afternoon but were not happy with the condition of their home ice.

The Red Wings skated for about an hour on somewhat soft ice and some of the players asked jokingly why they had to work in a swimming pool.

Detroit officials explained that new heating and air conditioning equipment was being tested, especially the latter, and that someone had failed to consider the effect it might have on the ice.

against Brentwood's great rugby tradition, the Hornets led 11-0 at half-time as Ron Caton scored a try, Denis Sommer converted and then scored minutes later on a penalty kick.

It may have been tradition or the wind blowing in its favor, but Brentwood came back fired up in the second half and ran over its rivals to tie the score at 11-11 and force the game into overtime.

FIRST TRY

Miles Dobson scored Brentwood's first try early in the half. Mount View's defence seemed to collapse after the shock of Dobson's effort and Malcolm Graham and Rick Rollins found openings, each scoring a try and putting College back in the game. Dai Williams converted Rollins' try.

With only seconds left in the first half of overtime and the play deep in Brentwood's half of the field, Mount View's Dave Hutchings picked up the ball from a set scrum and raced over from 30 yards to put the Hornets ahead. Sommer converted and it was game over for the gallant but beaten Brentwood club.

Mount View is rightly deserving of its title as Vancouver Island rugby champions.

After finishing third in league play, behind Mount Doug and first place Claremont, the Hornets and Mount Doug met in a playoff to decide who would meet Claremont in the final for the Howard Russell Cup, emblematic of high school rugby supremacy in Victoria.

Mount View's victories are now history, as the Hornets defeated Mount Doug in the playoff and then went on to defeat Claremont in the Cup final.

Stamps Sign Linebacker

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference today announced the signing of outside linebacker Jerry Campbell, 21, from the University of Idaho. Campbell, six feet and 208 pounds, is the eighth new player and seventh import signed by Stampeders. He was a Washington State high school star in 1961 and was named to the all-conference college team last year.

Yesterday's victory over Brentwood was a great morale builder for all local high schools as well as Mount View, as Brentwood's rugby fame is known far and wide.

Mays Remains Leo's Problem

Chualar May Meet Clay Again

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian heavyweight champion George Chualar of Toronto has had an offer from Cactus Clay for a return world title bout in Toronto, Irv Ungerman, Chualar's manager, said Thursday.

The offer is for "50 per cent of everything or a minimum guarantee of $200,000," Ungerman said.

Meanwhile, Chualar has accepted an offer to fight Levi Forte in Glace Bay, N.S., May 14. Forte was to meet Chualar earlier this year but the bout was cancelled when the Toronto heavyweight got a shot at Clay's version of the world title in March. Clay defeated Chualar in Toronto.

Leo Durocher is still having his problems, and his biggest problem is Willie Mays. Mays and Jim Hart each hit two-run homers and Juan Marichal won his third game as the Giants Pittsburgh kept one-half game ahead of the Giant however, as the Pirates defeated Cincinnati 2-1 on the strength of Matty Alou's triple and Gene Alley's squeeze bunt in the sixth inning. The victory ruined Phil Pappas' National League pitching debut, after coming over to the Reds from the Baltimore Orioles in exchange for slugger Frank Robinson.

Atlanta defeated Philadelphia Phillies, 5-4, as Rico Carty tripled in the tying run in the eighth inning and then scored the winning run on a wild pitch. Eddie Mathews of the Braves set a major league record when he played his 2,005 game as a third baseman. The old record was held by Eddie Yost, who played 2,006 for Washington, Detroit and Los Angeles.

New York Mets played before their beloved fans but were unable to break the jinx Bob Gibson has over them as St. Louis Cardinals came from behind with a 5-4 victory.

Gibson who now owns a 13-2 career record against the Mets, was saved by Curt Flood's two-run homer in the ninth.

With one out in the ninth, Lou Brock singled and Flood hit his first homer of the season, much to the dismay of the Mets, who had won a 2-3 record.

OUTDOORS

with Alec Merriman

Grilse or blueback fishing can come pretty costly these days, if you are one of those who try to get away with taking more than your limit of four salmon, any size.

Two Vancouver fishermen and one Port Alberni fisherman were each fined $300 in Nanaimo last Friday for taking more than their limit. The two Vancouver fishermen had 55 grilse in their possession. In another case fisheries officers found grilse hidden away in rubber boots and other hiding places in a boat. In addition to the fines, gear and boats may be confiscated.

These were flagrant cases of exceeding the catch limits. We suspect that there are other anglers who feel they are starved most of the year for salmon, so why should they stop at four on the odd occasion when they find fish?

There is a very good reason. The four-fish limit isn't something that was set arbitrarily by the fisheries department just to make it tough for sports fishermen. The sports fishermen themselves asked for a cutback in the grilse catch because they feared the depletion of salmon stocks and sought to do their part towards conservation.

The fines for exceeding the catch limits point out there is some excellent bluebacking around . . . in Raccoon Bay, north of Campbell River, Cormorant Bay, off Northwest Bay and Lantzville, off Nanaimo, Furber Pass, Tent Island, Maple Bay and in Saanich Inlet.

Hottest bluebacking is in mid-island regions. In Saanich Inlet there is still bluebacking off Goldstream Island, Willis Point, McKenzie Bay, Semanous Island and Mill Bay, but they are getting spotty and few limit catches are being taken.

A few springs are being taken in Saanich Inlet. Oak Bay is producing some fair spring fishing and some bluebacks off Discovery Light, in Beaumont Bay, The Gap and along the golf links. Some blues and jacks are being taken in Victoria waters. At Port Renfrew the big springs are starting to show, but generally it has been too rough to fish them.

Cold and windy weather last weekend and early this week didn't help trout fishing. Cowichan Lake had a setback after a spell of pretty good fishing.

A few days of hot weather should see it pick up in time for April 30 when there will be two trout derbies on Cowichan Lake. The AOTS will hold its annual derby, open to all comers on the day, and RCN Anglers' Association will hold a members' derby the same day in waters from the Narrows to the weir.

The King Fisherman Contest also opens April 30. The RCN derby will be down to 2 p.m., with weigh-ins at Bert Dodd's cabin between Honeyman Bay and Gordon Bay where he will have a trailer on the lakeshore flying a flag. All that is required to weigh in is a 1966 membership card.

John Ebert reports all Campbell River area lakes producing trout now for worm and bobber fishermen, trollers and spin-casters. Spring salmon are being taken right in front of Campbell River.

Cowichan River gave up an eight-pound brown from below the power line off Gibbons Road Sunday. River estuaries are all producing outthroats on right tides. Sproat Lake, Somass and Stamp Rivers are providing good trout fishing.

The road into Matheson Lake, off the Rocky Point Road on the right just before turnoff to Pedder Bay Marina, is now completed. There is no boat ramp and you have to carry your boat about 200 yards to the lake, but we have heard of one good-sized bass being taken from shore.

Youngsters have been having fun catching white perch under Parson's Bridge by the Six Mile House.

Monday's meeting of the Victoria Fish and Game Club's Fishing Chapter will feature estuary outthroat trout fishing with Bud Dunnett and Arthur Mayse to take part in a panel discussion. Meeting will be 8 p.m. at the Burnside Forest Research Laboratory, 506 Burnside West.

Sanders Two Up in Dallas Irons Help Lead

DALLAS (AP)—Doug Sanders' Irons carried him to a four-under par 67 and the first-round lead in the $35,000 Dallas Open Thursday as the Dallas pro found the 6,523-yard Oak Cliff Country Club course to his liking. Sanders, leading money and tournament winner of the year, had no problem with the stiff wind. "But the course always is good when you score well," he grinned.

Sanders, co-favorite with Gay Brewer to win the $15,000 first money, finished with a two-stroke lead over Miller Barber of San Antonio, Texas, Ken Still of Tacoma, Wash., and Bob Goody of Belleville, Ill.

Brewer, also from Dallas, posted a 71. He was deadlocked with 12 other pros.

Short Putts Sink Marlene

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP)—Phyllis (Tish) Preuss shipped in for a birdie from 65 feet on the 28th hole to beat Mrs. Marlene Stewart Streit of Foothill, Ont., after drawing even with 50-foot birdie putt on the 13th hole of their North and South Amateur Golf Tournament semi-final match Thursday.

The other final berth went to Mrs. Nancy Roth Syms, 6 and 5 winner over Mrs. Horton Semple of Sewickley, Pa. It set up an 18-hole all-Florida championship match today between the 27-year-old Curtis Cup teammates of 1964.

Both Floridians, Miss Preuss from Pompano Beach and Mrs. Syms from Hollywood, have been in the tournament finals three times in four years, each winning once. They met each other in 1963 when Mrs. Syms won 2 and 1.

Mrs. Streit, North and South U.S. Amateur champion 10 years ago, swept the first three holes and the 32-year-old Canadian appeared on the way to an easy victory as Miss Preuss bogeyed each of the holes, three-putting twice. Twice thereafter on the front nine she cut the margin to one hole, winning the short sixth when Mrs. Streit missed a two-foot par putt.

A par 3 gave Mrs. Streit the ninth hole and a 2-up lead, but she didn't win another hole. Only one hole was halved on the back nine.

After each parred the first four matches for Miss Preuss, extra hole, the break came on the par 4 second. Mrs. Streit years ago.

She took her No. 9 iron and popped the ball right at the hole. It nudged the flag stick and teared into the cup for her winning margin.

Each shot 76, two over women's par for 18 holes. It was the second extra hole victory in

Village Vote Ahead?

NANAIMO — A study group has been set up by Lantzville Ratepayers' Association to investigate incorporation as a village.

Revenue and expenditure over the last five years is being looked into, as well as the estimated revenue the area can expect in the future if village status is assumed.

Last week the group wrote to the Department of Municipal Affairs for information on villages in the province of similar size and population to Lantzville.

PROTOTYPE
Study group members Ted Woodland said "this will give us a prototype to work on."

"The question was raised by the community itself, to see what we can do for our tax dollar. We might find out we would do as well as we are," Mr. Woodland said.

THREE GROUPS
Under the terms of the municipal act a village can be formed from any area with a population less than 2,500.

At the present time Lantzville is served by three separate organizations, a community association, a ratepayers' group, and a fire protection district.

"All are looking after their little bits and pieces," Mr. Woodland's words.

BIGGER VOICE
Lantzville has a population of 1,088 covering an area from Nanaimo Bay to Dickinson Road. Mr. Woodland said village status "would give us a little stronger voice because we would be better organized."

He forecast a plebiscite would be put before ratepayers in the fall, when they will have an opportunity to make a final decision.

A village council normally consists of four commissioners and a chairman elected at the polls.

Schedule Discussion

Lawyer Marney Stevenson will meet a provincial cabinet subcommittee at 9:30 a.m. today to discuss the B.C. Ferries schedule.

Mrs. Stevenson represents several hundred ferry workers who asked earlier this year for a board of reference to be appointed to hear their complaints about the summer shift schedules in which they will be away from home many weekends.

Chief Underwood has not yet decided whether he will seek re-election.

It's tusks have been removed, but the tusks don't sink. The corpse does, and it has to be moved.

Even the thought of free garden fertilizer has lost its appeal. The big mammal grows hourly more high.

Removing dead sealions does not come under RCMP jurisdiction. In fact, the Mounties have politely but firmly declined the honor.

As neighbors wonder who is next on the list, the ripening mammal develops from a conversation piece to a disaster area.

Pleasure boats, veering in for a look, now veer out even faster.

Old Flag Booster Flies New Flag

By WILLIAM E. JOHN
NANAIMO — As far as Andrew Martin Mahle is concerned, it's the Maple Leaf for ever. The proprietor of the Wheat-sheaf Inn in the Cedar area sailed under the Red Ensign with the CPR for 22 years. Although he's landlocked now, he's still sailing under the Red Ensign.

It then over the Wheat-sheaf; and Mr. Mahle says it will keep on flying, alone. Mr. Mahle, who served in every Canadian Pacific steamship that was in service on the B.C. coast during his 22 years of service, started as bellboy in 1923. His final cruise was bringing the Princess of Nanaimo from Glasgow in 1951.

"I've got no reason to change flags," he said.

And to make sure he doesn't have to switch, he has just bought a good supply of Red Ensigns.

There is a new flag flying over the Wheat-sheaf. But it's a new Ensign.

Airport Project Approved

CAMPBELL RIVER — DC-4 aircraft will soon be able to land on the airport here.

The federal government has announced the runway will be extended 5,000 feet, and the present runway and aprons will be rebuilt to accommodate the heavier aircraft.

MORE PLANES

The airport was rebuilt and hard-surfaced one year ago, to handle increased air traffic.

At that time municipal council and the chamber of commerce pressed for the longer runway.

Pacific Western Airlines DC-4 aircraft now stop at Comox and Port Hardy, and have indicated they would stop at Campbell River if the runway is suitable.

Passenger load of the DC-4 is 90, compared to the 28-passenger average of the DC-3.

Qualicum Set For Vote

By DOROTHY BUTLER
QUALICUM BEACH — Voters will decide the fate of a $703,580 school building referendum May 7.

Assessed values in the district have jumped by almost $2,000,000 from last year.

Mill rate for school purposes is up two mills from 1965.

BIG PROGRAM

If the referendum is approved, an extensive program will be carried out.

This will provide classrooms, library facilities, covered play areas, activity rooms, equipment, industrial arts, home economics and commercial class facilities.

MORE STUDENTS

There will be science labs and accommodation for three occupational program classes.

The school estimates the student population will increase by 300 in the next three years.

A similar bylaw for $398,260 in June was defeated by 61 votes. The referendum needs 60 per cent majority.

Approval of centennial projects has been granted by senior governments for Alert Bay and Salt Spring Island.

Alert Bay's project is a centennial park and picnic ground; financing, senior governments $2,320, local $2,030.

Salt Spring Island plans a memorial park. Senior governments will pay $3,360; local share is $5,140.

Passengers Buy Tickets

B.C. Ferries general manager Monty Aldous said Thursday the Queen of Prince Rupert already has 16,000 passengers booked for this year, although she won't make her inaugural run from Kelsey Bay to Prince Rupert until May 20.

But he added that there was still space for every sailing except the inaugural run, which is booked solid.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Kiernan said Thursday the government has reached no agreement yet with Western Mines Limited about where a townsite should be located inside Strathcona Park.

Kiernan

A special legislative committee recommended during the recent session of the legislature that the firm be allowed to build a mining town inside the boundaries of the provincial park.

Mr. Kiernan said the delay in granting a permit to the company resulted from a disagreement about where the town should be located.

PLAN VETOED

He said he has rejected Western Mines' proposal to build at Ralph River on the eastern side of Butte Lake, where the government intends to build a campsite.

Mr. Kiernan also said that he still favored the Thelwood burn, swept by a forest fire in 1958, because none of the trees in the park would have to be cut if the town were built here.

Radio Ham Solves Viet Riddle

By KLAUS MUENTER

DUNCAN — Ham operator Charles Cardinal of Vista Avenue has helped solve a mystery about a US army major stationed in South Viet Nam.

It all started at the end of last month when in the family of the officer an emergency occurred.

A sister at Duncan, Mrs. Albert Richter, and another one at Victoria, Mrs. F. A. Bland, tried in vain to contact their brother, Major James Connor at Saigon.

Mrs. Richter said neither by cable nor by letter could her brother be located anywhere.

The letter finally was returned with the remark the whereabouts of the brother was unknown.

Tuesday Mr. Cardinal came into the picture.

He picked up a relayed message from the major through another ham operator, VE 7 BRE at Port Moody, who in turn had received it from ham operator W7 BA, Washington, D.C.

Mr. Cardinal explained the message probably originated at Saigon and was transmitted by a member of Military Amateur Radio service.

In any case, now the major's mother and two sisters on Vancouver Island know he is alright, and Mrs. Richter emphasized "these ham operators provide an outstanding service to the public and we are most gratified."

Shooting Star Trip Shot

Shivering Sanctuaries! High Dog Expelled

By BEA HAMILTON
FULFORD — Two women from Beaver Point set off in search of shooting stars, and found an adventure for which they hadn't planned.

They didn't find the shooting stars.

There are two types, the kind we see flashing through the heavens, and the pretty little wild flower which grows in the hills.

It was earth-bound stars the women sought.

Doris Anderson and Hazel

Gayne expected to be away about 30 minutes.

With Napper, a dog, they went into the hills.

The bush was thick. They scrambled well into the woods, couldn't find the flowers, couldn't recognize the place... and couldn't find the trail home.

INTO TANGLE

They finally struck a logging road, and decided it would take them onto Stewart Road. It didn't.

It led them into a tangle of slashings. Darkness came, and they couldn't see where they were.

The women decided there was no point going on, when they didn't know which way led home. They made themselves as comfortable as possible.

NO MATCHES

"We expected to be home early, so we hadn't taken matches or food," Doris said.

They found a large rock near a cedar tree, and made a shelter between the two.

LATE HUNT

They smashed some balsam branches and made rude blankets, to protect them from the cold. They wore only light clothing.

Napper helped to warm them during the long night.

But the dog decided to go and do some nocturnal hunting. When he came back, he smelled of something rather high, and the women ousted him from the shelter.

BAD BALSAM

The women said a balsam blanket cannot really be recommended. It's sticky, prickly, and is generally pretty awful.

A little while proclaimed the coming of dawn. They rose, climbed onto the big rock at 5 a.m., located Mt. Bruce and got their bearings.

They found better terrain, finally came out of Stewart Road where Miss Anderson had parked her car.

Temporary Sounds Permanent

Lawrence, Paul Grundy and George Duffield.

The mine and its new owners had a few ups and downs and then seemed to reach an even keel until this latest problem came to the fore.

At one time three shifts a day were in operation but in recent months only a morning and afternoon shift have been working employing about 50 miners.

One miner said the men were told to register for unemployment benefits and some are known to be tree planting and working at other jobs.

Should the mine be closed for good an era would come to a close and some 50 men would be out of work.

The problem of finding new employment would not be as serious as was the case when Canadian Collieries first closed down operations in Cumberland.

Work is easier to find today for the younger men, but undoubtedly some hardship would be felt by miners in the 55 and up age group.

Highways Department Approves Entrance

NANAIMO — Tentative approval has been given by the Department of Highways for an access entrance off the Island Highway for Doman's $500,000 lumber supermarket.

It will be a 30-foot entrance, but no left turns will be allowed either in or out.

The lumber store will be built on the vacant land immediately south of Terminal Park Shopping Centre.

When the project was first announced a major hurdle was permission for the entrance.

Bob Fawdry, agent for the project, said Doman's is now busy "drawing up plans and requirements and working out financing."

Marsh Outlines Study Program

LAKE COWICHAN — Dr. Leonard Marsh, professor of educational sociology at UBC, addressed a PTA meeting here on the regional college proposed for central and northern Vancouver Island.

The course would be two years, on a term basis, and include academic subjects for university transfer, technical courses designed to fit local industry, courses in business training and in the arts.

ADULT CLASS

Adult education and extension work would also reach out into surrounding communities.

It would have the advantage of lower rates than a university and lower residential costs.

LOCAL NEEDS

Legislation permits a group of school boards to set up a regional college, to fit local needs. Approximately three quarters of the funds would come from federal and provincial sources.

Dr. Marsh met with the local regional college committee members, Frank Collins, Mrs. Yvonne Green, A. F. Irwin, S. B. Croftman and school board representative Don Hammond.

No Comment on Vote

NANAIMO — Each new regional college application will be given a careful review before any more colleges are approved, Education Minister Leslie Peterson said here Tuesday.

An application by a Central and Upper Island Co-ordinating Committee for a regional college is now before the academic board.

"The board has the application, but I can't say at this time when permission will be given to hold a plebiscite."

"However there is no question of where it will be built. It is a question of when," Mr. Peterson said.

SOCIAL CREDIT

The education minister was speaking to 75 people at a public meeting sponsored by the Nanaimo Social Credit Association.

Mr. Peterson maintained a curtailment of school tax increases should take place this year.

The announcement April 14 of a 10 per cent increase in the homeowners' grant should take care of any hike in the school levy.

Mr. Peterson also holds the labor portfolio, and he had some gloomy prognostications for the coming year.

"We had a good year in 1965, but the way the horizon looks, I won't be able to make that statement next year," he said.

PUBLIC

"We will do our best to settle disputes in a voluntary way. We must govern for the public interest."

"The idea of management and labor meeting before contracts expire is obsolete," he claimed. "There should be continuous discussion and planning ahead. Management must be more tolerant than before and give notice of impending change."

Japan Filmed

ERRINGTON — Highlight of a recent PTA meeting here was the showing by Mrs. E. Robson, Lantzville, of pictures of Japan and Hong Kong, taken on her trip to the Orient last year.

Plans were made to hold a rummage and home baking sale at the Errington War Memorial Hall, April 30, 10:30 a.m.

North Cowichan Needs Answers

NORTH COWICHAN — Residents in the southern portion of the municipality may know what type of recreation they want, but the information doesn't come readily.

Coun. Hogan told council the response so far on a questionnaire printed in the local newspaper has been poor, and school children will take home similar questionnaires to be filled out by the parents.

The questionnaire is one attempt by the North Cowichan Recreation Commission to find out what type of recreational facilities people desire.

Reeve Morton informed the council "another hurdle has to be jumped" before a sewer bylaw can be put before people in the Gibbins Road, Mary Street, Sherman Road area.

He said the pollution control board is not yet fully satisfied with the proposed scheme.

Robbery Suspect Captured

LONDON (UPI)—James Edward White, who said his cut from Britain's $7,300,000 great train robbery was $364,000, was found by Scotland Yard detectives Thursday living in an $11-a-week room overlooking the English Channel.

White, 45, a Second World War paratrooper and erstwhile innkeeper, was arrested in the city resort town of Littlestone-on-Sea.

He said he was "fed up being on the run" for the 1963 robbery, history's greatest.

CHARGED
Members of Scotland Yard's crack "Flying Squad" rushed White to Aylesbury, 40 miles northeast of London and headquarters for the investigation into the theft.

White was charged Thursday night with "conspiring to rob the mail and robbing the mail with other persons and being armed with offensive weapons." He was to appear today before a magistrate in Linslade, not far from Aylesbury.

White had been the subject of the most intense manhunt in Britain since the days of Jack the Ripper for his part in

NEW YORK (LAT)—The president of the American College of Physicians predicted Thursday it will take another decade for heart transplants to become widely used surgical procedures.

But Dr. Irving S. Wright called Dr. Michael DeBakey's heart transplant in Houston, Tex., the beginning of a new chapter in medicine, which will eventually extend the lives of thousands of heart patients. In terms of benefit to humanity, the age of artificial organs and transplants will surpass the exploration of space, the New York cardiologist said.

"We have entered a new chapter of medicine, in the same way that the first space shot signalled man's move into deep space probes," he said. "The first probes may not be very successful, but they will lead to successes in the future."

"The many problems—the body's rejection of foreign substances, the failure of pumping systems, difficulties with clotting—all have to be overcome," Wright said. "We know we will see them, but we don't know the incidents we will have to expect or the success in combating them."

"The only way to find out,

really is by implanting them in man. You can go just as far in experiments with animals. But you run into problem with man that you don't find in animals. What works well in animals will not necessarily work in man."

U.S. War Toll to Date Could Double This Year

From AP, UPI

The number of Americans killed in the Viet Nam War now is more than 3,000. It could reach 6,000 or more by the end of the year if the recent rate of battle losses is maintained.

A summary of U.S. casualties released Thursday, listed 3,047 servicemen dead since Jan. 1, 1961, the date from which the U.S. counts its Viet Nam dead.

The roster increased by 89 names in the week ended Saturday. The weekly toll has been running at around 100.

EXCEEDS 1965

The new report showed more men died in the last 3½ months of 1965 than in all of last year. The 1966 total reached 1,427 through April 16. Combat deaths for 1965 stood at 1,365.

Americans wounded reached a total of 15,863 at the end of last week. More than half of these were hit since the beginning of the year.

Meanwhile U.S. and Vietnamese marines and the Viet Cong battled so close to Saigon today that residents of the capital could see bombs hurtling on their targets from U.S. bombers supporting the operation.

BIG BATTLE

In the Central Highlands, the Viet Cong made a mortar attack before dawn on the air field at Pleiku, 240 miles northeast of Saigon.

Police in Cholon, the Chinese section of Saigon, described the operation on the outskirts of the capital as a big one. They said U.S. and Vietnamese were engaged with the Viet Cong near the Long Vinh, which cuts through the Cholon sector.

The bombing was among the closest ever made to Saigon and the explosion of the bombs rattled windows and tableware in the heart of the city.

THREE SHOT

Politically-inspired violence erupted Thursday in the normally tranquil resort of Dalat, which had been all but immune even from the Viet Nam war.

Three civilians were reported killed in a gun battle between students and soldiers.

The fighting broke two days of relative quiet on the tense South Vietnamese political scene.

Dalat, in the mountains 145 miles northwest of Saigon, is considered the coolest spot in the country. It is an oasis for government officials, the wealthy and U.S. troops on leave.

Chairman Richard B. Russell (Dem.-Ga.) said the committee unanimously approved addition of $167,900,000 to defence authorization for a complex anti-missile missile.

Red Missiles Spur U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—A speedup in ballistic missile defense for the U.S. was urged Thursday by the Senate armed services committee to match reported Russian efforts on similar defenses.

Chairman Richard B. Russell (Dem.-Ga.) said the committee unanimously approved addition of $167,900,000 to defence authorization for a complex anti-missile missile.

DID MOUNTIE ROB BANK?

OTTAWA (UPI)—RCMP Commissioner George McClellan confirmed Thursday that a member of the force is under investigation for the armed robbery earlier this week of a bank in Trenton, N.S.

But a police spokesman refused to say whether the man was under arrest or had been charged.

Solicitor General Lawrence Pennell said in the Commons under questioning from Robert Coates (PC—Cumberland) that he had been told no charges had been laid by mid-afternoon and an investigation was proceeding.

IT'S ONLY MONEY

Pennell was asked by Coates to confirm the arrest Thursday of an RCMP officer "and advise the House of the circumstances leading to the arrest as well as what charges, if any, are being laid."

A lone gunman collected $1,900 Monday when he entered the Bank of Nova Scotia in Trenton shortly before closing time, handed a teller a flight bag, and ordered: "Fill it up... it's only money."

The holdupman fled in a newspaperman's car.

Liberals Survive Confidence Vote

OTTAWA (CP)—The minority Liberal government defeated a Conservative non-confidence motion 112 to 83 in the Commons budget debate Thursday night.

The motion said the Liberal government failed to stimulate trade and production and had not tackled problems of inflation.

Seventy-four Conservatives in the chamber were backed by 15 New Democrats, Social Credit Leader Thompson and two of his followers and independent Conservative Maurice Allard (Sherbrooke).

CREDITISTES

Supporting the 103 Liberals against the motion were Creditist Leader Casquette and six of his party, H. A. Olson (SC—Medicine Hat) and J. A. Monaghan (Ind—Trois-Rivieres).

Standings in the 265-seat Commons are Liberals 131, Conservatives 97, New Democrats 21, Creditistes nine, Social Credit five and independents two.

Social Credit MPs have maintained the country does not want another election and in the past have voted with the government when the issue appeared likely to bring a close vote.

PARTY SPLIT

This time the party split, with three of its members supporting the motion and one siding with the government.

The budget debate is expected to wind up today. Conservative House Leader Michael Starr suggested this during Thursday's debate.

Price Rise Concerns U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Living costs in the U.S. climbed four-tenths of one per cent in March, a smaller jump than in February but sufficient to cause continued official concern over price pressures.

'Hope I Would Have His Courage,' Says Coroner

Mercy Killer 'Morally Correct'

MONMOUTH, England (UPI)—A coroner said Thursday a father was "morally perfectly correct" in taking the life of his incurably ill 12-year-old son.

Arthur Gray, 45, killed the boy who was dying of cancer, last July with an overdose of tablets and gas. Gray took his own life the same way last Saturday.

Monmouth coroner Kenneth de Treslure said at the inquest on

Gray, "this is quite one of the most distressing cases I have ever had to deal with. It starts off with a perfectly happy family—mother, father and child."

The son contracted the disease in 1964. Gray was convicted of manslaughter but given the lenient sentence of two years on probation.

"I am quite certain in my own mind that the deceased was morally perfectly correct in taking the course he did take in connection with his incurable little son. Legally, of course, he was wrong," said de Treslure.

"All I can say is that if I found myself in circumstances like the deceased, I hope I would have the moral courage to do what he did."

"One fact sticks clearly in my mind, and that was the evidence that the little boy was so dreadfully ill that he actually screamed if anybody approached him when he was lying in bed—undoubtedly out of terror for the pain he would be caused if he were moved or touched."

The coroner said that after the tragedy, Gray and his wife separated because she had not wanted to continue living in the house where their son died while Gray refused to leave it because of his affection for the boy.

He said that judging from the notes Gray wrote before killing himself in the house, "it is perfectly apparent that he felt completely unable to go on any further and he refers to himself as ceasing to be any longer a useful member of the community."
